Arab terror killings

Israel said today the Geneva peace talks were being jeopardized by terrorist attacks which Arab governments were aiding and abetting. The warning was issued by Mr Aharon Yariv, the Minister of the Interior, after three Arab gurmen landed on the beach at Nahariya in northern Israel last night and killed a woman and her two children as well as a soldier before being wiped out by an Israel force.

Noting the Arab Governments' overt support for the terrorist organizations. Mr Yariv said Israelis asked themselves whether Egypt and Syria, the signatories to the recent disengagement pacts, were sinceere about their promises to pursue a peaceful course.

"Should we believe the signatures affixed by the Arab States to the disengagement agreements or their threats during the recent days?", he asked. Threats and offers of military aid had been made by Arab governments in the past wek in response to the Israel attacks on alleged tetrorist bases in Lebanon. The minister said if the Arab states were not willing to control or influence the Arab killer organizations, whatever they signed was not sincere. "If they are unable it means whatever settlement we agree upon will not be valid", he added.

"We shall judge our neighbours by their deeds not by their words. If positive deeds offset negative words, we shall be only too happy. But I fear positive words will be offset by negative deeds".

Earlier this afternoon, Mr Rabin the Prime Minister, reported to the Knesser on the Nahariya killings. He said Lebanon was not actin as efficiently and systematically as it could to prevent Ara terrorism. He said Lebanon was the central base for terrorist organizations and bore full responsibility for the prevention of terrorist acts planned and

Coalition moves threaten to split Liberals

By George Clark Political Correspondent Mr David Steel, Liberal Chief Whip, last night attempted to clarify suggestions that Liberal MPs in Parliament are moving in favour of forming a coalition if the next general election produces another deadlock between the main parties.

What he did not make clear was that the Liberals would join only a coalition of all the parties; that they would not simply accept office in a Conservative government on receipt of certain assurances about the acceptance of key liberal policy

The Labour Party has made plain that it would not con-template a coalition; thus the Liberals are open to the accusation in advance of the election that they may be wilking under certain circumstances to join the Conservatives, and any nationalist who might be agree-able, to form a Conservativedominated government.
To many Liberals that seems a recipe for disaster, and possibly the destruction of the party as an independent politi-cal force which is not tied to the vested interests of trade unionism or big business. The Young Liberals have already said that they are against coalitions of any sort, and if there is an attempt to lay down in advance conditions on which the party would be prepared to join a Conservative administration, they say they might move out of the party.

Those responses are predictable in a situation where the party obviously has to consider the attitude it would adopt in the event of another impasse, especially in the light of a recent opinion poll conducted for the party by Research Surveys of Great Britain.

The survey showed that roughly one voter in two favours electoral reform When people were asked for their views on the introduction of views on the introduction of the single transferable vote system, making it more likely that there would be a coalition of MPs from more than one party, 49 per cent thought it would be a good thing, 30 per-cent that it would be bad and 20 per cent had no opinion. Diversity is more fun than grand statements of principle for a practice that strives to create a sense of place

Gold medal goes to architectural group for first time

"I more or less did what my brother did. If he had become circus clown, I should have been a circus clown, too. Or an estate agent, if that was what he had chosen." The brother, Michael Powell, became an architect, and therefore so did his younger brother, Philip, whose practice, Powell and Moya, has received the Royal Gold Medal of the Royal Institute of British Architects. It is the first time that a group rather than an individual has

The three original partners, Philip Powell, Hidalgo Moya and Michael Powell (who later became LCC education architect and died in 1971) joined forces at the Architectural Association's school in the late 1940s. After working for Sir Frederick Gibberd, they set up on their own to enter an archi-tectural compenition to design new housing for a Westminster City Council site in Pimlico.

City Council site in Pimlico.

"We had set up on our own with no real work, ghosting for anybody at three bob an hour. We earned just enough to give it up for six months and work on the Pimlico competition. It was the sort of gesture you could make then, because you could live, if not exactly on bread and water, on very little", Mr Powell says.

To their own and to most other people's astonishment these three unknowns won the competition. The result was the establishment of the firm of Powell and Moya and a pioneering piece of British the needs of the people living made plain they could have had housing design, Churchill Garin it or using it.

It was a token. Dr Powell says, but it expressed the belief that people should, wherever possible, have the chance to live in houses with gardens. If there is a consis-tent trend in the practice's arrivate to design it is, he says. attitude to design, it is, he says, that they have "tended to move more and more away from the monumental".

In a way those words describe the Powell and Moya lifestyle. Many practices would, on the strength of the Pimilico win and their later competition success with the Festival of Britain Skylon, have grown rapidly into the kind of architectural practice that employs hundreds of architects and hundreds of architects and draughtsmen and juggles with jobs worth tens of millions of one. In practice their attitudes were not always understood or appreciated. When they had successfully designed three hospitals, people could not understand why they would not take on a fourth. That would have been where commercial logic led; the idea that they preferred to turn to something different seemed to many verber bigarte and arbitrary. preferred to turn to something different seemed to many rather bizarre and arbitrary. And those three hospitals, at Swindon, Slough and High Wycombe, caused many furrowed brows. They were all different: one was built to a layout new in this country, one was single-storey to suit a wide site, one was tall in fit a cramped site. Many observers disapproved. They assumed there must be a single way to build hospitals. "I think it was felt that we had no principles", Mr Powell says.

These three hospitals brought a crisis on the practice. The work should have been staggered. For reasons that could not have been foreseen, the projects coincided. An over-stretched practice is one in which partners may not be able to keep control, and quality is prejudiced.

"The reason was an uncom-plicated one, reflecting Powell and Moya's personal attitude to their practice. 'It was just that we had got a lot of work on. We felt that if we took on more we could not do the job properly'."

The firm's individual approach to every job means that its buildings have no distinguishing "trade marks" such as white tiles or a particular kind of aggregate cladding that shows you that a building is by Powell and Moya.

Their Chichester Theatre (1962) has no obvious family resemblance to its Christ Church picture gallery at Oxford (a favourite of Mr Powell), nor does their British Expo Pavilion at Osaka (1970) resemble their Putney swimming baths.

The aim with all their build ings has been to suit users' needs and to match or create a sense of place. This is as true of their London comprehensive schools as of their skilful intill buildings for Oxford and Cambridge colleges. Their latest London project, the new Museum of London on the edge of the City's Barbican develop-ment, promises to achieve this in spice of quite severe con-

The black author of a book on race relations and his publisher have been reported by another black man to Sir Robert Mark, the Metropolitan Police Commissioner, for allegedly inciting racial hatred.

The author is Mr Dillibe Onyeama, a Biafra-born old Rtonian and son of an African judge at the International Court at The Hague.

In the blurb to the book John Bull's Nigger, Mr Onyeama is said to admit to "a contemptuous opinion of my fellow blacks." He greatly admires Mr Enoch Powell and views with alarm the future black birth rate in Britain. Unless Mr Powell's warnings are heeded, he says, the United Kingdom will eventually be taken over by

After the meeting yesterday three options were left open to the company: an appeal to the Secretary of State for Scotland; a new application acceptable to the committee; and abandonment. Mr E. D. Loughrey, man-the parent company, National Bulk Carriers, of New York, ltaer this week, The committee rejected the application by eight votes to seven. It had been told that bringing more people and largescale propjects into the area at present would not be in the county's best interests. The visual impact of the proposed refinery was taken into account.

Mr Torquil Nicolson, convener of the planning committee, said yesterday that concouncil had put great emphasis on storing the oil as far underground as possible. The com-pany's plan made no firm com-mitment in that respect.

MR JUSTICE MELFORD
STEVENSON said that no general meeting of the company was held during the three years and no balance sneet was laid before the company during those years. Annual returns were filed, but none had a duly certified copy of any balance prepared and audited by the company's auditors during any of the three years. Mrs Stockdale did instruct or sought to instruct the accountants to prepare the necessary documents. It seemed at breach or non-performance.

There was no balance sheet and profit and loss account of the company which could be annexed to the returns in the present case. Seeing that the charge against Mrs Stockdale was a failure to annex to the annual return a duly cerdified copy of every balance sheet laid before the company in general meeting, one was tempted and perhaps justified to approach the case by stating that the problem was to be solved by saying: "You cannot annex to a return something which does not exist, and nobody ought to be prosecuted for that which it is impossible to do."

It was not quite as simple as

It was not quite as simple as that because in Park v Lawton ([1911] 1 KB 588) the judgment appeared to be based on the conappeared to be based on the con-tention that the defendant could not rely on his own default in relation to a failure to hold a com-pany meeting and other breaches of the duties imposed by section 26 of the Companies (Consolida-tion) Act, 1908. That judgment

Super-Aeration Ltd ((1904) 20 TLR 425), the report of which was scarty and the reasoning of the argument and judgment was difficult to collect from the report. His Lordship preferred to rest his view in the present case on the simple proposition that Mrs Stockdale could not observe the particular duty on which the informations were based because there was no balance sheet to annex. One could not be punished for falling to annex something which did not exist. On that ground alone the appeal should be allowed and Mrs Stockdale relieved of the penalties which had been imposed on her.

The 1948 Act did not contain His Lordship preferred to rest

The 1948 Act did not contain The 1948 Act old not comain any provision, such as was found in other branches of the criminal law, which enabled a person to be convicted of an offence other than that charged if the evidence emerging at the hearing justified such a conviction. It would not be right to treat the Act as if it contained such a provision. That was an additional reason, if one was required, for allowing the appeal.

MR JUSTICE WALLER said that he had had initial doubts because of the history of the provisions in the 1908 and 1929 Companies Acts and because of the authorities which showed that a failure to hold a general meeting was no defence. However section 127 of the 1948 Act was in fundamentally different terms. The words "a true copy of every balance sheet laid before the company in general meeting" were compelling, and if there was no general meeting no balance sheet could be put before it, and therefore nobody could comply with the section.

The Lord Chief Justice agreed with both judgments. Mrs Stockdale was awarded costs out of central funds. Solicitors : Manches & Co ; Solicitor, Department of Trade.

The possibility of local custom emerged when one looked at all the land surrounding and adjoining Riswood Common, which the judge did. He concluded that a custom requiring the occupier of Spratt's Cottage to fence against the common was proved. He recognized that a custom to be upheld as local law had to be known to be of immemorial origin, reasonable, continued without interruption, and certain. On the evidence, he concluded that he could properly find the existence of immemorial usage. The court would not disturb that inference

The U.S. Government says we build the quietest big jet in the world.

Passengers say we build the most comfortable.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration has certificated the Lockheed L-1011 TriStar, with its Rolls-Royce RB. 211 engines, as the quietest big jet in the world.

For people on the ground, that's good to hear. But it's only part of the story. The other parts are comfort and fuel economy.

Take comfort. We designed the cabins with graceful lines that accentuate the width, eight-foot sculptured ceilings and straight-up-and-down walls. So you feel as if you're sitting in a spacious living room, instead of a tunnel. By using two-across seating, rather than the usual three-across, you're never more than one seat away from an aisle on the L-1011 TriStar.

The seats themselves are big and comfortable. With more room in between, so you don't have to rub elbows with anyone you don't want to. And with extra room to get in and out of when you want to get in The Lockheed L-1011 TriStar. and out Because ladies don't like to check some of their kits along with their luggage, we built overhead cabinets larger than anyone else's.

And the L-1011's unique ventilation system fills the cabin with more fresh air than any other plane. Even the light is soothing. Cool, indirect lighting, rather than harsh, fluorescent light as on other planes.

And because the galley is downstairs out of everyone's way, you can concentrate on your own meal. Not evervone else's.

Even with all of these comfort features, the L-1011 TriStar is economical when it comes to fuel. It takes 20% to 30% less fuel per passenger than older, narrow-body jets. And it is incredibly reliable. It's setting reliability records for on-time departure, based upon official U.S.A. Civil Aeronautics Board figures.

The Lockheed L-1011 TriStar. It's the most comfortable way to go.

EEC plan to help trade of developing nations

From Our Own Correspondent Brussels, June 25

Malaysia, one of the Commonwealth developing countries whose trade is suffering adversely as a result of British membership of the European Community, has appealed to Brussels for a better deal.

Almost immediately after his arrival vesterday, the Shah had a private meeting with the President at the Grand Trianon at Versailles. Another took place this morning at the Elysée Palace. Later there was a reception at the Hôtel de Ville, and a luncheon given in honour of the imperial couple by M Chirac, the Prime Minister.

This afternoon, the Shah visited the French nuclear re-search centre at Saclay, in the suburbs of Paris. Later this week he will inspect the nuclear centre of Marcoule, during a brief tour of Provence. In a freeranging discussion, recorded for television, he was ques-tioned not only on oil prices but also about political prisoners, the activities of the Iranian secret police, and the "despoic" character of his regime.

The Shah emphasized that he would not come to France empty handed. "The French have a very important part to play with us", he said. He told Le Monde: "We can help French industry; it could help us to industrialize. We intend to place straight away with France orders for about 5,000 megawatts of nuclear electricity. That is only an ex-

Ex-minister heads French industrial reform team

From Charles Hargrove

Paris, June 25 Of all the reforms announced by the Government on June 19 as part of its social "package" the most ambitious—and also the vaguest—is the reform of relations between capital and abour in industry to increase worker participation.

It has been met with a mixture of scepticism and hostility on the part of both, if only be cause such grand designs have been debated for years. But the Government is determined to go ahead with its plans regardless. It feels that the old conception of the manage-ment's "divine right" which still prevails especially in small and medium firms, is in contradiction with the transformation of French society

M Pierre Sudreau, the deputy and Mayor of Blois, and a former Minister of General de Gaulle who resigned in 1962 over the revision of the constitution, has just been ap-pointed to preside over a com-mittee on industrial reform.

The Government wants to act quickly. M Sudreau is allowing himself six or seven months to draw up a report which will propose a whole series of reorms.
"I am naturally aware of the magnitude of this undertak- troversising", he said. "It is a huge studied and difficult task. But I consider that the mission with which I have been entrusted is without exaggeration one of the most essential at the present time. I am happy to see the President and Prime Minister are fully aware of the scope of this undertaking."

M Sudreau said he would work on this report with all the parties concerned.

parties concerned.

The unions are divided on the issue of worker participation. Some of them regard it merely as a "gimmick" thought up by politicians and employers to divert attention from real problems of wages and working conditions.

Others, like the Communist-led CGT look upon it as a war machine designed to blur the essential distinction between capital and labour, and involve the unions in problems of man-agement which are not their

Beta 1800 ES £2,440.54 inc. VAT

This year, if you want a Beta 1800. you'll have to think a bit harder about it. because there are now two to choose from.

The new addition is called the Beta 1800 ES.

ES stands for Equipaggiamento Speciale. Which means that it has some special features which put it in a luxury class, ahead even of the standard Beta.

For the sun-lover we've installed an integral steel sliding roof with a special one-handed, easy opening mechanism. The frame is formed in manufacture to retain the strength of the roof and body structure.

Then there are the electricallyoperated front and rear windows, controlled from a console between the front seats, and the all-round tinted glass with special shading at the top of the windscreen.

Finally, we've fitted distinctive light alloy wheels which give a finishing touch to the Beta's elegant body.

Of course, you still get all the features which make the standard Beta so impressive. Such as fully-reclining seats with adjustable head restraints. two-speed wipers, electrically heated rear window, extensive rustproofing and under body sealing, independently adjustable front and rear heating and ventilation and self-levelling low beam headlights.

And, most importantly, you get the impressive Beta fuel economy.

In a factory test, driving the car at constant speed with two people on board, the Beta returned 44.8 mpg at 37 mph and 29.4 mpg at 75 mph.

So that's the Beta 1800 ES in a nutshell. Now all you have to do is choose.

Greek Premier's surprise appearance at Nato

From Our Correspondent Athens, June 25

Mr Androntsopoules, the first

Greek Prime Minister to attend an international conference abroad since the military junta assumed power in 1967, flew to Brussels today with Mr Tetenes, the Foreign Minister, for the Nato summit meeting.

The trip has caused specula tion here about talks on the dis-pute with Turkey over offshore oil rights in the Aegean, and prompted questions from the Opposition about the propriety of the Greek Prime Minister signing a document reaffirming the Nato countries' "dedication o the principles of democracy, respect for human rights, jus-tice and social progress.".

Mr George Mavros, the Liberal leader, in a statement to foreign correspondents, said today that the Brussels meeting ame at a time "when the Greek people have been de-prived of the right to elect their own government, when human rights are being violated, the freedom of the press has been abolished, and people are being arbitrarily arrested, tortured, imprisoned or deported to concentration camps, which are a stigma of western civilization.

"The Greek people are wondering in the name of which ideals they are being asked to sacrifice themselves as members of the Atlantic Alliance." Mr Emmanuel Kothris, a for-

Schedule change cuts Nixon-Brezhnev talk

From Our Correspondent Moscow, Tune 25

The launching of Salvut 3 today coincided with the announcement that President Sixon will be going to Star City, the Soviet space centre, on Saturday morning. Both events are somehow complementary.

The first is likely to fill some of the empty spaces in the news caused by meagre results of the American Soviet summit. The second will increase the amount of Mr Nixon's time devoted to less to political summitry.

While the Americans had remained sceptical all along, until quite recently the Russians had hoped that the visit might produce a breakthrough in Soviet-American trade or some accord on arms limitation, and help to speed the European security conference to an auspicious ending.

These hopes now seem likely to be disappointed. President

Nixon was originally due to take off on Saturday morning for the Crimea and spend the entire day with Mr Brezhnev, the Soviet party leader. Under the revised schedule the morning and most of the afternoon will be taken up first by his trip to Star City, and then by his flight to Semferopol, and thence by car to Oriand, which he will reach

Firm plans for industry in next few weeks: white paper will not have list of names

answered by Mr EDWARD SHORT, Lord President of the Council and Leader of the House (Newcastle upon Tyne, Central, Lab). During exchanges about a speech by Mr Benn, Secretary of State for Industry on state ownership of industry.

MR ROST (South-East Derby-shire, C) said—It is alarming at a time when business confidence is time when business confidence is already demoralised as a result of the Chancellor's anti-business budget, that the Secretary of State for Industry should be contributing to the nation's crisis of confidence by threatening to demolish the rest of the free enterprise sector. Will the Prime Minister dismiss the saboteurs on his own front bench or resign and make way for a Government that will be strong bench or resign and make way for a Government that will be strong amough to cope with the problems of this country? (Conservative cheers and Labour laughter.)

MR SHORT—The biggest factor which has contributed to reduction of confidence this year has been the three-day week for which the Opposition were entirely responsible. (Conservative protests and Labour cheers.)

MR EDWIN WAINWRIGHT MR EDWIN WAINWRIGHT

MR GARDINER (Reigate, C)—Will he undertake that the promised green paper will be published in the lifetime of this Parliament, and furthermore when it does come, it will specify not only those industries which are thought appropriate for takeover by the National Enterprise Board, but also those companies thought appropriate for participation in the so-called planning agreement system.

Issue involving almost the future of this nation. (Cheers.) If the two barometers of confidence for industry are investment and the wo barometers of confidence for industry are investment in the latter part of 1973 and the first quarter of 1974, and the share index in November last year?

The figures would indicate that the lack of confidence by British industry is not related to this government but related to the policies of the last government.

MR SHORT—Certainly investment in plant and machinery in are for participation in the so-called planning agreement system.

MR SHORT—Certainly investment in plant and machinety in manufacturing industry fell by 20 per cent in those years. In 1974, it is not likely to be much better. It is an appalling state of affairs. It is what the Prime Minister devoted much of his Nortingham speech to. The Opposition will not apply itself to this problem.

MR HEATH (Bexley, Sidcup, C)—Is there no way under Clause S(1) of the constitution of the Labour Party (Conservative laugher) to enable the Priese Minister to wriggle out of the commitments of Mr Benn in exactly the same way as yesterday in the national interest he wriggled out of the commitment on nuclear tests? (Conservative cheers.) MR SHORT—For one of the biggest wrigglers in Britain, that is a bit thick (Loud Labour cheers.) The Prime Minister wriggled out of nothing yesterday. Government seeking a balanced policy in sale of council houses

MR KAUFMAN, Under Secrefary for the Environment (Man-chester, Ardwick, Lab) moved a new clause (tax exemption for new clause (tax exemption for self-brild societies) to insert a new clause into the Income and Corporation Taxes Act, 1970, to enable self-building societies, approved by the Secretary of State, to obtain exemption from corporation tax on income from completed houses occupied by members and from tax on chargeable gains on transfer of the houses to members. He said that societies almost invariably disbanded when the houses were occupied by members and the new clause was the first step towards putting self-builders on a better tooting, comparable with co-owners. The clause was agreed to.

MR KAUFMAN moved a new clause (Revenue deficit grants for registered housing associations) to deal with some of the

MR EMERY (Routton, C) said some of the details of the new clause would have to be looked at but the Conservatives stood for the basic principle that anybody living in a council house who wished to buy should be able to.

Every local authority should be willing to sell council property. He said that the clause was to fulfil an undertaking he gave during the Committee Stage and provided the Secretary of State with discretion to make a grant towards the annual revenue deficit of a registered housing association in respect of an accounting year after January 1, 1974. stage looking at the whole method of mortgage procedures to try and ensure that lower income categories should be able to obtain mortgages. State aid to council tenants was in the area of £850-£900 each a year while the aid to a person with a mortgage was in the area of £280-£340 a year.

MR JOSEPH DEAN (Leeds, West, Lab) said the amendment would not help the suress areas where for every three or four families housed in council property, there was another on the walting list. He knew of a case where a council house was bought by a council tenant for fil 200 and sold five years later at nearly £9,000. This sort of burden should not be placed on central government or local ratepayers.

MR TYLER (Bodmin, L) said the clause would impose new con-trols over local authority heusing policies.

This would be the warst postible moment to impole this new requirement to impole this new requirement on local inchastics. It was narrowly redicated view they were patting forward because the new clause did not seek to look at the obsession of learner in all its formal it sought to wave a fastly and worn bunner because it did hot bear relation to facts on the ground or to a considered view of what the future fanner pattern should be.

The Secretary of State has received a number of requests, to which he has not been able to accede, to exempt individual pupils in one way or another from the requirements of the existing legislation.

Some teachers have expressed anxiety about the possibility of truancy or indiscipline resulting from the obligation of attendance, in some cases after examinations, on pupils who are not free to leave until the end of the summer term. MR BOYSON (Brent, North, C) —On the point about full secondary courses, this usually means that after five years, when they have taken their examinations, GCE or CSE, they leave at the end of May. There is an acute problem that that condition has continued because the staff do not want them there and for two months boys who are not sitting GCE or CSE examinations are told in many schools more or less to in many schools more or less to leave. the regions which required it. To discourage development, was a backward step.

MR JOBL BARNETT Chief Secretary to the Treasury, said that industrialists were not being discouraged. The amendments would not help those seeking employment in development areas or those in dustrialists seeking to go there. On reclamation, the development gains charge was an extension of the existing capital gains tax and it would therefore only arise when a capital gain arose. That meant that where a landowner was fazed on his land profits as a trader or developer, the development gains charge would not apply.

In those cases the profits arising charge would not apply.

In those cases the profits arising would be charged as income and not as a capital gain. Therefore, the whole of any surplus would be on a par with the treation of mineral royalities.

Accordingly (he said) I am propositing to bring forward an amendment at report stage which will have the effect of taxing half the development gains attributable to mineral rights. The other half would remain chargeable as ordinary capital gains.

That relief should not be available generally, but only where land was sold with planning permission to exploit the mineral rights.

I give the assurance that no further British tests are due to take place in the hear future and certainly not before the defence review is completed and a report made to the House. The House will want to debate that report.

MR WILSON—Neither dismay nor pleasure would have altered the position. The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Mason) on May 21 this year said that in our defence review all options are remaining open. I think perhaps that to have decided with regard to this test not to proceed with it, would have been to have closed one option that was open. MR ALLAUN (Saiford, East, Lab)—Will the Prime Minister give the House an undertaking that he will halt the so-called improve-ment of the Polaris missile at a cost of £100m? This is a suicidal weapon which if released would result in instant retallation and the wiping out of our country. Is he more influenced by a hand-ful of brasshats than by the Labour Party conference and the TUC con-ference which decided last year on a policy that nuclear bases in our country whether American or British should be wound up? MR WILSON-On the first part, this is a matter for the defence review and a number of other considerations. He gave an estimate of the cost of certain aspects of the nuclear programme. I know that Mr Allaun has recently produced a pamphie on these matters which I intend to study. The figures he gave for the annual cost of the nuclear programme was £39m out of a total of £3,500m. I am not undertaining the importance of £39m but it should not be overrated either. Regarding the Labour Party con-ference, if he is referring to a reso-lution carried on Thursday of the conference last year-1 said earlier that nothing has happened contrary to the Labour Party programme hecause that particular resolution which he has in mind did not carry by the necessary two-thirds majority required under Clause Regarding the Labour Party conwhich he has in mind did not carry by the necessary two-thirds majority required under Clause 5 (1) on the party constitution to qualify for inclusion in the party programme. (Conservative laugh-ter.)

The Labour Party have for a long time been committed to the abolition of the independent nuclear deterront. Liberal MPs oppose proliferation of British nuclear tests which we do not regard as contributing to Britain's security and further believe they represent a threat of general proliferation of nuclear weapons. MR WILSON—It was not following the precedent entirely of the Conservative Government before 1954 but the precedent of the action during the years of the Labour Government when it was amounced in the House after the period of explosion was conperiod of evaluation was com-pleted. So far as I recall, there was no criticism in the House

Mr Johnston says that Liberals are not in favour of continuation of nuclear tests. These matters can come up in the defence review which will be reported to the House, as will be the development of the strategic nuclear deterrent exclusively within Nato. MR PALMER (Bristol, Northeast, Lab)—Some of us on this side greatly look forward to the day when all nuclear weapons and testing will be abolished by international agreement. Meantime, provided this country has nuclear weapons it is necessary that they weapons it is necessary that they should be tested from time to time so that they remain effective. (Conservative citeers.)

MR WILSON—What Mr Palmer says is what we said in the manifesto—that we look forward to, and successive governments have worked for, the extension of control over tests, underground as well as in the atmosphere. We look forward proliferation. The Labour Government initiated the non-proliferation treaty on behalf of this country and the Conservative Government the Regarding the policy of the party

Tennis Mottram's encouraging advance

Tennis Correspondent Tennis Correspondent
Christopher Mottram, aged 19, competing for only the second time, reached the third round of the men's singles at Wimbledon by beating Charles Pasarell, 6—2, 9—8, 9—7 yesterday afternoon. Mottram's encouraging advance is a reminder that two years ago he briefly had Bjorn Borg cornered in the final of Wimbledon's junior invitation tournament. But Borg, a year younger, left school earlier and has since progressed rapidly to the highest class. It seems that in a less obtrusive way, Mottram in a less obtrusive way, Mottram is moving in a similar direction.

Mottram is fourth in the British Mottram is fourth in the British rankings, for he won the national under-18 championship on wood and clay and was twice under-21 champion. This year he has played on both the World Championship Tennis circuit and the World Team Tennis league competition. He is intensely ambitious and has a powerful financial motivation. He is also a player who, from his first appearance on the WCT tour carly this year, immediately earned the respect of his opponents.

His task yesterday was formidable. Pasarell is a fine player, but has somehow always fallen narrowly short of the honours narrowly short of the honours his ralent suggested must come his way. He would be type cast as a handsome gunslinger in a Western. He even talks with a drawl. He has played some memorable matches at Wimbledon, notably in 1967, when he heat the holder, Manuel Santana, in the first round, and in 1969, when he lost to Ricardo Gonzales in a match that lasted for five hours and 12 minutes.

Pasarell was visibly discontented with his form yesterday. He has certainly played better tennis. But Mottram kept him under severe pressure, usually with ground strokes that time and again left Pasarell stranded. Perhaps two games were more important than the rest when the match reached its crisis. In the third set Pasarell played a superb game to break service to 5—5. That left him serving for the set.

But he was frustrated by some serving for the set.

But he was frustrated by some rasping ground strokes from his gawky young opponent. Three games went with service. Then Mottram finished the job. Pasarell served a double fault and Mottram then passed him with a cross court backhand. In the next rally Pasarell failed to put away a smash but Mottram missed an opening by playing an easy forehand into the next.

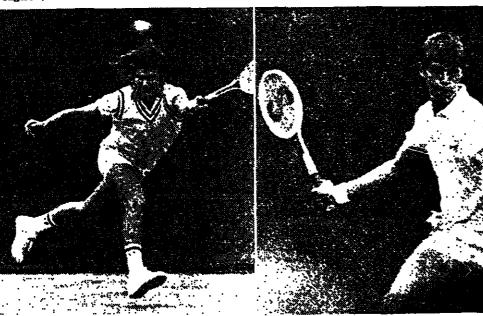

Yet Mottram reached match point in the next rally with a backhand down the line. That was the only match point he needed. He hit another backhander down the line that forced Pasarell to play a loose forehand volley cross-court. Pasarell fell as he hir the shot and Mottram steered a match winning forehand into open court as Pasarell desperately leapt from the ground and set off rms success for Britain did something to offset the defeat of Roger Taylor who was beaten 4—6, 9—8, 6—3, 9—8, by Dick Crealy, a huge Australian, who is one of the most agreeable eccentrics on the circuit. that Crealy put his errors behind bim and for the rest of the match was slightly more consistent than Taylor in maintaining pressure. At times it seemed that Taylor was slightly slower in his footwork and reactions than he used to be. But this was an exciting scrap between two strong mem. The patterns were predictable but this detracted little from the entertainment value of the match. Taylor missed a chance when he led by five points to three in the tie-break in the fourth set. That meant he needed only two more points for Ove Bengtson, of Sweden. Elsewhere, a lot of matches that began on Monday had exciting finishes. Ray Moore, who had three match points on Monday evening, failed to win a point in the two games that completed his match with Brian Gottfried. that completed his match with Brian Cottfied.

In the women's event Linky Poshoff, ranked third in South ifrica, avenged a defeat in the critish hard court championships by beating Susan Barker, of Britain, 6—0, 9—7. Miss Boshoff is only 17 years old and will not likely though it seems, her home town is apparently called Unex-hage, which has yet to achieve-renown as a nursery for tennis

Miss Boshoff played a fine first set, concentrating on Miss Barker's backhand, enforcing error after error, and conceding only eight points. In the second set Miss Boshoff was serving for a 5-1 lead but here became tentative and lost four successive games. Miss Barker's forehand was working at last and it commed games. Miss Barker's forehand was working at last and it seemed that the Devon girl might finally get into the match. Twice Miss Boshoff-served for the match and was frustrated. But on the third occasion she romped home, thanks to four wayward forehands by Miss.

The quick old fox who took his dog for a walk at Wimbledon

By Philip Howard

An elderly, bantam-sized gentleman aged 39 bear one of tennis's rising young roosters yesterday in a brilliant match that illuminated the second day of Wimbledon and inspired relucint tremblers on the brink of middle age in his audience with new hope.

A Rosewall, of course, is a Rosewall in the stands on shis toes, lantern-jawed, and with black hair greased into a introduce crest, the most perfect intie right-handed stylist never to have won Wimbledon. He beat Vijay Annitraj, the Indian No 1, aged 20, 6ft 3in tall, dark and handsome, a player with a delicacy of tenth and a parfection of barks.

the balls were stuffed with horse sair. He was runner-up in the singles finals of 1954, the year in which Amritraj was bern, 1956 and 1970, of all unlikely progressions. And here he is again, leaping around the court lobbing, smashing and otherwise maltrating the ball as violently as reckless youngsters, at an age when not turn India into a bad team

By John Woodcock

With a bump that could be heard from Amritsar to Allahabad, the Indians fell from grace at Lord's on Monday. They were bowled out in their second innings for 42, and so lost the second Test match by the shattering margin of an innings and 285 runs.
England's last winning series over India was in 1967, and India's last defeat, by anyone, was in 1970, at the hands of the Australians. To those hoping for a Australians. To those hoping for a full day's cricket it was a sad anticlimax. To Indians in India It must seems like the end of a golden age. Having become accustomed to success, they will not have cared to hear that India had been bowled out for the lowest score they had ever made, and the lowest ever to be made in a Test match at Lord's.

Had the day broken fine and sonny, like the first three, India, I am sure, would have made a fight of it. They were good enough to have done so, whatever impened now. Instead, it was overcast and hazy, for the first time in the match the hall moved about, off the seam and in the air. time in the match the ball moved about, off the seam and in the air. on fitness of Lloyd

By John Woodcock By John Woodcock

It looks as though Lancashire may have to do without Lloyd, as well as Engineer, in the semi-final round of the Benson and Hedges Cup against Surrey at Old Trafford today. Engineer is on tour with the Indians; Lloyd, just back from Barbados, where he has been helping to choose the West Indian party to tour India later this year, was very much under the weather when he arrived back yesterday and is an uncertain starter.

Lancashire play Surrey, themselves without Intikhab, now captaining the Pakistanis. Surrey applied in vain to have the loan of Intikhab for today. They have Arnold back, though, and also Edrich, and yesterday they had a good win over Northamptonshire. If Lloyd feels up to playing. Lancashire should just about have the edge but it hooks a close the edge, but it looks a close Lancashire's bowling will be opened by two relatively old timers. Shuttleworth and Lever, so will Leicestershire's against Somerset. Against Kent, McKenzie and Higgs had as much as anyone to do with Leicestershire winning. Today these two could present Somerset, as well, with their trickiest problem. But I am not at all sure that this match is the "good thing," for Leicestershire that many think.

Kitchen has run into rare form Lancashire's bowling will be with the bat, and Richards is potentially as much of a match winner as Davison. There are even winner as Davison. There are even those who say that Close taught Illingworth a lot of what he knows about captaincy, just as others hold that Close, as Yorkshire's captain, was never the same after Illingworth had left for Leicestershire. Now they are both in exile and both successful. This is a match they would each give much to win.

Lancashire v Essex

Worcestershire clinched their fifth win in seven games when beating Gloucestershire by six wickets at Worcester vesterday to retain second place in the county championship table. Although the wicket was slowly taking spin, a target of 167, with all their wickets standing at the start of the day was a mere formality once Headley had confirmed his catstanding form.

After making 104 in the first inmings, Headley added another 76 to the victory effort and has now Dudleston, J. F. Steele, J. C. totalled 617 in his last eight chambelled for the constitution of the const pionship innings. Headley set a ported by Ormrod in another brisk gond of 72 in 80 minutes.

lowest of the season. At the start of the day their last three wickets went down for a further 21 runs. Jackman was the most successful Surrey bowler, with four for 55, while Pocock had three for 14, and Roope two for 22.

A brilliant not out century by Harris paved the way for Notting-Harris paved the way for Kotting-hamshire's first county champion-ship win for more than a year as they raced to 252 for four in 200 minutes after a sporting declara-tion by Kent who closed their imings at 251 for seven. This followed an unbeaten eighth wicket stand of 64 in 12 overs by Shepherd and Rowe.

Then Notinghamshire began hadly losing both White (nought) and Randall (three) with only 21 runs on the board. But Harris and Smedley rescued the home county with a run-a-minute third wicket stand of 129. Tunniclifie joined Harris with 100 needed and the pair hit them off in 55 minutes.

Livershire's heave effort to pair hit them off in 55 minutes.

Lancashire's brave effort to reach a formidable target of 267 in under three hours, just falled in an exciting finish against Essex at Old Traiford. As the match see-sawed in a rense last hour, Essex also had a chance of victory—but it all ended in a draw with Lancashire having the edge in bonus points.

Hayes hammered 86 glorious runs in 82 minutes with 13 boundaries.
Sussex failed by only 16 runs to beat Glamorgan at Colwyn Bay after being challenged to store 265 in 190 minutes. Dashing half-centuries by Morley and Graves took Sussex to the brink of a third took Sussex to the brink of a third successive victory.

When the final 20 overs began Sussex still needed 106 with five wickets in hand and Graves was going strongly. But when he was caught at the wicket after batting an hour for 62 (eight fours) Snow and Waller decided to close up the game. They held out successfully and put on 55 in 70 minutes as Sussex reached 249 for eight. The feature of the morning cricket had been the brilliant batting of Lewis, whose 95 made in 133 minutes included four sixes and 11 fours.

If fours.

In spite of a hard hitting century by Harvey-Walker—it was three years to the day exactly since he scored a first class hundred—Derbyshire failed by 24 runs to get the 344 set them by Warwickshire at Edgbaston. The match finished as a draw with the last pair together.

Lancashire were 13 short of a famous victory when their eighth wicket fell in the last over and they decided to call it a day. Essex had declared their second innings at 234 for seven, 266 ahead. But that figure did not seem so remote as last pair together.

Blagrave unlikely to get popular win

Today and tomorrow Salisbury have their most important meet-ing of the season, those on holiday in Norfolk can go to Great Yarmouth, and Ripon put on their only evening racing of the season day in Norfolk can go to Great Yarmouth, and Ripon put on their only evening racing of the season with an unusually late start at 7 o'clock. It is a good thing that no races are split into two divisions, as at Salisbury this afternoon, for the finish at Ripon would have been held in semi-darkness at around 10.15.

In Salisbury's Gwen Blagrave Memorial Handicap there would be no more popular winner than Red Brigand. For this race, over a mile and a quarter is sponsored by Herbert Blagrave in memory of his wife, and he is the owner and trainer of Red Brigand. The five-year-old carries top weight of 9 st 5 lb, a place he has earned by his victory this year in the Rosebery Stakes at Kempton Park in April, and on his excellent form in 1973 when he woo handicaps at Epsom, Goodwood, Sandown Park, and Chepstow. On his last outing, Red Brigand was second in the "Jubilee" Stakes to Jumpabout, and he is sure to go well, but I doubt if he will be able to give a stone to Lepidus. At Goodwood Lepidus beat Brian Swift's useful handicapper, Prince Gour-met, comfortably, and he comes from Dick Hern's stable, for which, in the past month, few things have gone wrong. Hard Choice, Rasti, Great Guns, and Water Pistol have the best claims in the Bibury Cup Handicap. Great Guns won a maiden race, at Kempton Park on May 31 from the heavily backed favourite, Tintoretto, and with 8 st 4 lb, he sawerely handleaned I take ls not severely handicapped. I take is not severely nanutappen. I take tim to win from Rasti, beaten a abort head at Sandown Park by Montreal Boy, and Hard Choice, who stayed on well at Newbury when fifth to Night in Town. Old Chad, at Ripon, may take Mr David Robinson nearer to the 40 mark by winning the Wath Handicap and Cove appeals most in the City Handicap because of his first rate record in winning his last two races. Old Chad was second two weeks ago over a mile and a half at Beverley to Viking Spirit and Cove, on his last visit to Ripon, ran away from his field in the last furlong to win by six lenoths

Belper steered to a steadier course

Since he has only one eye, Lady Manton's Belper likes to see clearly where he is going. Unformately the hurly-burly of a horse race is hardly the best spot to guarantee such clarity. In consequence, the chestnut five-year-old is not the most predictable or manoeuvrable of runners.

Luckily, for those who made him 9-4 favourite, he and Ron Hurchisson nut the pieces tohim 9.4 favourite, he and Ron Hutchinson put the pieces together perfectly yesterday with an all-the-way win in the feature race at Brighton, the Operatic Society Handicap. Yet, since the same tactics had failed abjectly at Epsom last time, the stewards yesterday quite rightly held an inquiry into the difference between the two performances. After the property they were, in my view, equally they were, in my view, equally right in accepting the explanation from Hutchinson and the trainer John Dunlop, that at Epsom the horse had just "run unaccountably badly".

horse had just "run unaccount-ably badly".

On later reflection, however,
Dunlop thinks that there may be another and even simpler explana-tion than Belper's one-eyed waywardness. For, since that run at Epsom, the Arundel stable has opened a new 10-furlong wood shavings gallop which, with the prevailing hard ground, gives horses the priceless oppos of stretching out without of jarring themselves. This gallop through the lands has been a long-held dream of the Duchess of Norfolk and she told me yesterday that before Belper's success the gallop had already paid even more handsome dividends because it was over that As often happens with fast ground at this time of year, it was a good day for favourites and besides Belper, Hand Picked, Redesdale and the one-time professional loser Mujon all just their market positions. In the two races where favourites were beaten In the two races where the favourites were beaten the stewards were called into action. In the Palace Handicap it was to adjudicate on an objection from the apprentice Kevin Mooney, on Great Echo, which proved to be so optimistic that he had to forfeit his deposit, leaving the race with the likeable veteran lightweight Ray Reader on Welsh Dragon.

Apollinaire called Robert was the starting point for the the international Exhibition in Delaunay "one of the most dramatic use of colour contrasts Paris. They worked with 50 gifted artists of his genera-which were so important in young assistants and this celetion", and said that the two both her and Robert Delaunay's bration of the speed of the most important "new tendencies" in modern painting were neous contrast" where two or as near anything in the twenters of cubism and Delaunore strongly contrasting inthuence early represented fragen paint. Picasso's Cubism and Delannay's Orphism. (Orphism was a name that Apollinaire had coined himself for the work of Delaunay and other related artists and apart from conveying the poetic exhilaration of Delaunay's painting it was not particularly appropriate.) To

If after 60 years, Dalaunay's work does not seem to stand quite as high as they or Apollinaire regarded it, he has for a long time been seriously underrated as an artist, very largely because of the exaggeration of the importance of Cubism in

Where Robert Delaunay concentrated on pure painting, Sonia Delaunay was immedi-ately involved in design and applied art. She made "simultaneous curtains" for Apolli-naire's flat on the Boulevard St Germain, covers for books by Apollinaire and Blaise Cen-drars, fabrics, clothes and stage

One of her most important works was an extraordinary edition of Cendrars poem Transsiberien, an account in free verse of a journey made by Cendrars on the Trans-Siberian express at the time of the Russo-Japan-ese war. It is not a book, but almost a huge folding poster or map (a map of the route of the Trans-Siberian railway runs across the top of the poem). The lines of poetry are printed down the right hand side of the two metre long sheet, while down the left side a simultaneous painting by Sonia Delaunay runs alongside the text which is also decorated rith splashes of colour set different typefaces and printed in different coloured inks, following Marinetti's prescription in his Futurist manifesto of a few mouths earlier "Destruction of Syntax, Wireless Imag-ination, Words in Freedom ". In the twenties, Sonia Delaunay concentrated largely on fabric, dress and costume design. In 1922 she was commissioned to produce 50 designs for materials by a Lyons silk manufacturer and these "simultaneous fabrics" and the dresses made from them were displayed at the Arts Decoratifs exhibition in Paris in 1925 where Robert Delaunay and Fernand Leger painted murals for the Palais de l'Ambassade de France. In 1925 she also designed 16 costumes for the Rio de Japeiro carnival. In 1937 the Delaunays were commissioned to paint murals for the Palais des Chemin de Fer and the Palais de l'Air at more strongly contrasting right colours juxtaposed influence each other at the same time, they discovered a formal equivbe compared in quality. One of Sonia Delaunay's two murels for the Railway Pavilion was entitled "Journeys Far Away" and for the Pavilion of the Air she painted three murals, "Aero Engine", "Propeller" and "Control Panel". The Delaunays had both been at Le Rourser airpoor in May 1927 to Bourget sirport in May 1927 to see Lindbergh land in The Spirit of St Louis These are now in the Museum of Monu-memal Arr in Lund in Sweden. Robert Delaunay died in 1941, but Sonia Delauzay has 1941, but Sonia Delautay has continued to work and is still working today in her eighty-ninth year. Her exhibition at the Redfern Gellery consists mainly of paintings done over the last two decades. The contrasts of colour are still exhilitating. If anything they are more simplified than the estiller works and with this there is some loss of subtlety. is some loss of subtlety, although it is difficult to compare them with the early works home reading.

Like Marinetti, J.-H.

Lartigue, Francis Picabia and

Edward Wadsworth, the Delaunays were wealthy and owned large, fast cars. They were inus not directly aware of the indignities and cruelties that technology has inflicted on men. Yet one should not, for this reason, reject their optimistic reason, reject their optimistic vision. For their privileged position enabled them to see how technology could be, if properly controlled and not heedlessly exploited.

Now, with our hindsight of how rechnology has been mis-how technology has been mis-used, it should be possible for artists to cautiously envision the possibilities of creating a better future, instead of re-treating into the cynical rejecrion of much neo-Dada activity or the fruitless and pretentious intellectual game of most conceptual art.

For one thing, I suppose, the Western parody does not in itself give Brooks a clear enough target for his special kind of comic attack, the wild (Cleavon Little) to Rock Ridge in a wholly successful effort to undermine the citizens' morale. The new sheriff finds an ally in the Waco Kid (Gene Wilder) who is the epitome of every Western gun who ever sobered himself out of delirium tremens assault upon greed and meanness and racism through an allout jettisoning of any regular notion of good taste and de-cency, a high-camp irrelevance. to avenge lawranorder. To-gether they tame the town mon-ster; the black sheriff wins over the Dietrichesque siren

Tippett's third quartet, played by the Delme String Quartet in the Assembly Rooms on Satur-day morning, has after 25 years assumed the nature of a classic, its two Egethoven-like slow movements perfectly balancing the brilliant linear writing and subtly English character of the three fugues. It was played with fine technical control and much of the requisite poise.

Quartet in a performance of the Schumann Quintet that was as beautifully groomed and pro-portioned as the venue itself to which was added a warmth and spontancity to match the composer's. Here, as in the Tip-pett, the acoustic sometimes deadened the sound, obscuring the clarity of the interpreta-tions. The worthwhile feature of the Lucerne Piano Trio concert on Saturday night in the same hall was a fascinating work by the players' companiot Frank Martin, his Trio based on Irish Songs. In its previously broadcast form its inspiration, Schumann's Heine cycle of the same name, did not form an integral part of the performance. Now it did so, preceded by a hieratical praeludium based on the cycle's eight song and followed by three lengthy movements.

Solid wastes management and reclamation Land drainage and flood prevention

Following a recent reorganisation of its services, the Council carries out in one Department responsibility for two of its major and expanding activities in the field of environmental health:

The solid wastes management and reclamation function, including the operation and development of a service currently dealing annually with some 3 million tons of domestic and other refuse, and with an annual revenue budget of over £10m. These responsibilities will increase considerably with the expected enactment of pollution control legislation currently before Parliament.

The land drainage and flood prevention function for non-tidal water courses throughout some 400 square miles of Greater London: the work in hand also includes a multi-million pound tidal flood protection scheme, incorporating a moveable barries across the River Thames at Woolwich, currently in the early stages of construction.

The work of the Department, which employs a labour force of 1100, is carried out within two largely autonomous branches, each possessing all the necessary professional skills and expertise; centralised administrative, financial and personnel services are

The Council is seeking a Director who will provide both corporate management and enthusiastic leadership and will ensure that the current opportunity to develop the Department's services along progressive and forward-thinking lines is not missed. Not only should he be appropriately qualified; he will also be expected to have considerable experience at senior level in a large-scale organisation and be able to demonstrate a record of creative and innovatory achievement, enterprise and managerial competence

Britain on the rack of Ulster torture claims

When two years ago the Irish govenment started the proceedings which would take the British to the European Commission of Human Rights over their treatment of prisoners in Ulster, it endured more than a little condemnation from Whitehall. London Ministers suggested privately that it was all a publicity stunt, by the ruling Fianna Fail Party and the then Prime . uster, Mr Jack Lynch, and the general impression was deliberately put about that such inquiries as the Irish might execute were more likely to serve the cause of the IRA than of justice.

True, Sir Edmund Compton and his men had concluded in who had been hooded and subjected to the so-called "deep interrogation" techniques of the Army in August of the same year had undergone "physical ill-treatment". But then they also said that physical ill-treatment did not mean brutality which was an "inhuman or savage form of cruelty" ima disposition to inflict

So while the Irish were test-ing the admissibility of their case—a case thich was even-tually to take their lawyers to an air force base at Stavanger to listen to the evidence of the RUC Special Branch—the British continued to maintain their innocence. Civil servants at Stormont insisted that the talk of beatings during interrogation of terrorist suspects emanated from the imagination of the IRA while the Army discreetly pointed out that if one or two men did occasionally overstep the mark at question time this was wrong but rare. To win its case, of course, the Irish government has to prove that torture of some form was a deliberate administrative practice in Northern Ieland and not just a series of isolated inci-

There then emerged a fascinating propaganda war between the British and the Provisional IRA, a contest in which reality—until, at least, the first few months of this year-remained somewhat oballegations of torture to their own advantage, seizing upon every shred of medical evi-dence that men had been beaten by soldiers during interrogation as proof that the military authorities and the police were little better than the Gestapo. Mr Gerry O'Hare, an IRA man who is one of Sinn Fein's more astute members and is currently locked up in Portlaoise Jail, used to help organize the press conferences at which such claims were

Meanwhile, several Army officers at Lisburn also made it their business to chat to journalists confidentially and to point out that the IRA's command structure had been mation gained during the "deep" interrogation. The interrogation methods themselves they would say, were harmless. One of these officers was Colonel Maurice Tugwell, who has long since moved to higher climes. Indeed, he was later to repeat his contentions to the Staff College in Canada and early last year a Canadian pubearly last year a canadian pub-lication carried a signed article by him—it was given the re-vealing title "Revolutionary Propaganda and the Role of the Information Services in

Counter - Insurgency Opera-tions "—in which he said rather naively : "Interrogation methods used by the security forces in 1971 brought in a mass of invaluable intelligence. These methods, combined with the internment of known terthe IRA's capability and to destroy it quickly. A massive propaganda campaign launched, with help from people who should have known better. None of those interro-gated by these methods sufiШ fered any injury or effects ... "

All this, of course, was written a year before Mr Patrick Shivers, a 37 year old plasterer from Toomebridge in Co Antrim, walked out of the High Court in Belfast richer by £15,000, courtesy of the British Government. Shivers's case— which received little publicity at the time—was important be-cause he was the first of the 11 men referred to by Compton to claimed false imprisonment, torforces in 1971 and said that after therefore, timely to set out some his arrest he was hooded with a black pillowslip, subjected to unbearable noises, deprived of of the main arguments. sleep and required to stand at a wall in a position of stress. He also claimed that he now suf-fured from a personality change depression—several held without trial and ques-tioned like Mr Shivers have complained in almost identical fashion—and that he lost 16 lb in weight. Mr Shivers's state-ment of claim, similar to others now awaiting a hearing before the Northern Ireland courts, said that after his arrest on August 9, 1971, he was on several occasions punched and photographed naked. He re-called after the damages had been awarded on February 13 that during his week in custody he had heard men "crying out for death, and I still hear those men crying today".

Last week in Belfast a second man, Mr Gerard McKerr, who has been interned since August 1971, was given £10,000 agreed damages after a similar ciaim. Another of the Compton 11, Mr Paddy McClean, who lives near Omagh, also says he has suffered nervous problems and is expecting £15,000 for the treatment he underwent in 1971.

These claims take no account of the scores of men who are trying to take action in the courts over alleged beatings during interrogation over the past three years. One Belfast that about 100 men are making such claims through his office alone. In the past five veeks, five of them have received solicitor complains that the authorities are always reluctant to deal with such cases until they reach the door of the court —at which point a hurried settlement is reached.
The Irish lawyers are at present basing their own case against Britain on the evidence of 49 men—including some of the 11 who were hooded—but which are slowly coming before the courts in Belfast, claims which lawyers in the north confidently expect will cost the British taxpayers hundreds of thousands of pounds over the propaganda has subsided on both sides, the legal profession south and north of the border is waiting with some academic interest to see which will cost Britain more: the judgment of the European Commission in 1975 or the persistence of ex-

Nuclear words that fork no lightning

One of the more sardonic of the it has been explored graffiti which adorn the contemporary urban scene proclaims that the world ended yesterday - today is an action replay.

The thought that it might be true lurched unsteadily through my mind when the Prime Minister announced on Monday in the House of Commons that Britain had carried out an underground nuclear test. Al-though the test had been planned and approved under the Conservative Government, it is reasonable to assume that the small inner Cabinet which deals with matters of nuclear strategy in the Labour Government—if not the full Cabinet—had reviewed the decision and approved it. If this is so, it seems to me that whatever else may be threatened in the forthcoming Defence Review, the nuclear deterrent will survive. There are, however, still important decisions to be made about the nuclear weapons themselveswhether, for example, large sums of money are to be spent on the missiles and their war-heads in an attempt to "main-tain their credibility". It is,

The first thing to be said is that the issue is not a confron-tation between left and right. It is nothing to do with CND or with the more extreme manifes tations of unilateralism. It is a straightforward matter of stra-tegic analysis and intelligent defence policy—a concern which should be at least as close to the heart of the Monday Club or Mr Roy Mason as to that of Mr Frank Allaun. Let me say at once that I do not suggest that anyone who advises the Government to acquire new or improved nuclear weapons is, necessarily, mad or evil. It is a simple fact of life in the modern nation state jungle that, if a new area of technology presents it of mor self, scientists will not rest until miles;

ing available, there is always a military adviser to declare that it is indispensable. Only one thing delights the martial mind more than today's weapon system tomorrow's. It is, therefore, important that the simple commonsense arguments against exploring this new technology or acquiring the new weapon should not go by default.

I do not intend in this context to argue the case for and against a nuclear striking force. I happen to believe that Britain's nuclear weapons add nothing to our national military security, and that even in an allout nuclear war involving the United States and the Western Alliance, they make no strategic has apparently accepted, for continuing to maintain a nuclear deterrent. Let us, therefore, for the purpose of this argument, proceed from the assump-tion, however unacceptable it may be to some people, that the British Polaris fleet will continue to be an integral element in the national defence structure. Even so, it is possible to demonstrate that this attempt to "improve" the Polaris missiles would be disproportionately exinternational efforts to control he arms race, that it would damage the country's foreign relations and, most important, that it is entirely unnecessary. Let me try to explain why, if possible without having resort to strategic jargon.

sists of four submarines, of which two, at most, are usually on patrol at sea at any given time. Each submarine carries 16 Polaris A3 missiles with a range of more than 2,500 nautical miles; from their patrol

There are no circumstances in which Britain would contemplate striking first at the Soviet Union with nuclear weapons. We are quite incapable and the retaliation would re-ments of a political nature, which the Labour Government of today, like that of 1964-1970, with great accuracy at any major city in the world. Furthermore, each missile has three separate warheads (or multiple reentry vehicles). Any single missile of the 64 therefore carries more explosive power than was used in the whole of the Second World War, and is capable of annihilating a large city, together with all its inhabitants. It is important to be clear at this stage that this is precisely what they are for. There are no circumstances in which

The British Polaris fleet con-

Union should set up ballistic missile defences around its cities, the present warheads may not be able to get through. It is, therefore, necessary to im-prove their "penetration capa-bility". This apparently ignores the fact that under the terms of the Strategic Arms Limitation Agreement, signed in 1972, both the Soviet Union and the United States agreed to limit themselves to two ballistic missile defence sites each—one around their capital cities, and one around their capital cities, and one around their capital cities, and Britain would contemplate strik-ing first at the Soviet Union with nuclear weapons. We are quite incapable of destroying one around their own offensive So even if Moscow should ver become totally invulnerthe Russian ability to retaliate,

Already the construct a foreign and defence. Arms Limitation Tall policy on the assumption that made a mockery of tits defences could guarantee to on President Nixon's i destroy every one of 192 nuclear warheads aimed at its cities. In passing, it is worth saying that if the potential enemy is any country other that the Soviet Union, the arguments against further test ing are correspondingly more powerful—unless, of course, it is the United States, in which case it is unnecessary to read exact estimate of the cost of acquiring new nuclear weapons but there are some indications in a United Nations report issued in 1968 by a study group which included Professor Emelyanov of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, and Lord Zuckerman, these chief scientific adviser to the British Govfic adviser to the British Gov-ernment. The cost of resting one 20 kiloton device was esti-mated at between £4m and

The cost of producing 200 warheads to reequip Polaris force, however, could not be less than £120m, and the production programme would almost certainly involve further tests. It would be strangely perverse for a government contemplating cuts of several hundred millions elsewhere in the defence budget to undertake this kind of expenditure, for demon-strably minimal military advan-

Is this the greatest artistic crime of all?

To tell the citizens of Israel that they are making fools of themselves about anti-semitism, and shameful fools at that, is a task that calls for considerable delicacy in the execution. Now delicacy in the approach to a controversial subject is perhaps not the very first quality that springs to mind when the discussion turns to me; all the came, if I do not say it I fear that nobody else will. So, chalking my name on the soles of my boots. I dive once more into the pool. The people of Israel are making fools of themselves, shameful and inexcusable fools; and it must not be. Mr Zubin Mehta, the gifted young Indian conductor at present directing the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, was to have conducted a concert today in Tel Aviv, made up entirely of the works of Wagner. For those who do not know, I should mention that the works of Wagner, and also those of Richard Strauss, are hanned in Israel; the ban has no legal force, but every time any orchestra or musician has tried to include any of their music in a programme, the subsequent outcry has forced the abandonment of the attempt. Violence has been threatened, and on one particularly dis-graceful occasion used; when one of the world's greates: Robert Fisk violinists (himself a Jew), on a visit to Israel, protested against the ban, he was physically attacked by a fanatic who tried to break his arm. The same sort of outcry has on this occa-

a name it does not deserve) for this attitude is that Wagner, in addition to being personally anti-semetic, was made a kind of folk hero by the Nazis, and Strauss, though there is no serious evidence that he was himself anti-semitic, was a col-laborator with the Nazis, despite the fact that he had the profoundest contempt for them. Those are the facts; in addition, there is the baseless belief that Wagner's philosophy was itself Nazi (he died in 1883, and his greatest work is about as explicit a denial of the principles of creeds like Nazism as any work of art could be), together with a few repulsive touches of guilt b such as the fact that Wagner's daughter-in-law (who was born 14 years after his death was a Hitlerite, that Wagner was one of Hitler's favourite composers (but Beethoven was another) and that the code-name for the Nazi policy of racial extermination was taken from a line of one of his operas.

And on that pitiful foundation Israel, of all countries has erected a policy of banning art for non-artistic reasons, which is exactly what the Nazis did when they forbade performan-ces of the music of Mendelssohn and publication of the poetry of Heine on the ground that they were Jews.

It is no use telling me that the two cases are not on a footing, that banning a man's work because he is a Jew is in a different category from ban-ning it because he was an anti-semite. What is different in the two categories is the parure of the man; the policy is iden-tical, because it rests on the same viie principle—the principle of putting a man's artistic creations under an interdict because of something that is in the time. Are Israeli students The reason (to dignify it with

On the contrary; they should insist on higher ones. For let us put the argument in its extreme form, and suppose that the music of Wagner had been written by Bichmann; would their policy then be justified? No, it would not, for it is perfectly possible to hold a man in perpetual ranted racially puinfamy and still venerate him pseudo-Greek façade for the works of art he has what the Parthenon miwho defied the Nazi and fascist tyrannies in the name of art, put this in the most explicit form when he said of Richard Strauss: "To Strauss the musi-cian, I take off my hat, to Strauss the man I put it on-

If you call the roll of conductors who have been proud to love the music of Wagner, and to perform it, you will find it studded with the names of practically every Jew who ever held a baton. From Hermann Levi in Wagner's own lifetime, through Mahler and Bruno Walter in a later generation, to Klemperer yester-day and Bernstein today, they behaving, in this particular respect, worse than the Nazis, for Wagner was not in fact guilty of any of the things alleged against him except antisemitists, and if Israel were to ban all the artistic creations of Shakespeare omit the Merican ban all the artistic creations of fact of the works of Shakespeare omit the Merican courageous determination to be at this loathsome ban the merican course of the works of Shakespeare omit the Merican courageous determination to be at this loathsome ban the merican courage of the works of the works of the works of good friend to Israel; but by this courageous determination to be at this loathsome ban the merican course of the works of the works of shakespeare omit the Merican courage out the loathsome ban the merican course of the works chant of Venice?

God and Mammon have rarely been as closely linked as in the literature sent out by the Rev T. L. Osborn. Osborn, who appears to be based in America, says he has "found the secret that unlocks God's great store-house of plenty". This handily discovered key is his Pact of Plenty. "the Soulwinning Pact that is prospering thousands financially".

It is a sort of pay as you pray scheme. The chosen are sent the Pact of Plenry pampblet, which has 12 identical slips ordering them to "Honour the Lord with thy first fruits". First fruits are £2 a month per prayer, and for the true believer (or the truly credulous) an invitation to send

Now the etymologists have come up with the answer. It is an American word to describe people who pretend to be work-ing when they are idling.

Lord Davies, as Harold Davies, a schoolboy in Glamorgan, may have picked it up from Boy Scouts in his class. According to Chambers Twentieth Century Dictionary the word means, in America, a Scout's plaited cord varicoloured leather strips. It can also mean work, of little or no practical value, especially work officially provided as a palliative for unemployment.

That could be damaging economically as well as elector ally. The Prime Minister's whole political strategy at this time seems to be based on the belief that he can keep the left quiet,

But this delicate policy of ambivalence can be ruined by an issue emerging which tears apart the restraints of political calculation. Mr Wilson has taken this risk and he deserves credit for doing so. It is in the country's interest because occasional tests are necessary if Britain is to retain her independent nuclear capability. The ultimate security of this country, as of the rest of western Europe, depends upon American nuclear protection. But there is always likely to be greater sense of security throughout western Europe if some European nations themselves have the capacity to inflict an unacceptable degree of damage upon an aggressor. Britain's nuclear weapons are good enough for that, even though they do not put her in the league of superpowers. And it is better for the political con-fidence and stability of Europe that France should not be the only European country in that position. The test which has been carried out in Nevada was Britain's first for vine years and has not extended the possessiou of nuclear weapons. It was a threat neither to peace nor to health, only to the political comfort of the Government. But that is a price which any British Government should be prepared to pay for national security.

Ray Buckton of the claims should not be made more often than once a year, and that the interests of lower-paid workers should be given priority.

Aslef is a small union with considerable bargaining power, whose regard for differentials has often caused strain in its relations with the other rail-way unions. Nevertheless, Mr Buckton's opinion carries weight in the movement, if only because Aslef is better able than most unions to ensure that what it asks for it gets. To that extent, its deeds modify everyone else's expectations. The season of summer conferences, now coming to an end, has already sharply reduced the prospect that the social contract will have much effect on wage claims. In a time of unprecedented inflations and uncertainty, it would take a rash union leader to deciare to his assembled members that he proposed to soften his demands, even for the good of the Labour movement as a whole.

It is not the union leaders nal on the day before the who are making most of the general council's meeting to running. The local government workers' conference reversed its executive's plan to call off strikes over extra payments for working in London, and paid back the TUC for its attempt last April to intervene in that dispute by roundly repudiating the social contract. Mr Scanlon's temporizing speech to the engineers last week may have been the most he could say without creating a rumpus and losing his freedom of action. The builders' conference has called for increases of 87 to 107 per cent in their basic rate, in spite of their moderate leader-

Those leaders who believed to think well of the social contract, like Mr Jack Jones and Mr Donald Basnett, do not venture to proclaim what a settlement within its terms might mean to their own followers. Mr Tom Jackson has made it clear that however admirable the general concept may be, his Post Office workers must be treated as a special case. But even leaders who are quietly keeping their options open will scarcely be able to settle within the terms of the contract if other unions on every side make claims that go far beyond keeping pace with inflation. The limited capacity of the TUC to bind individual unions is mirrored by the limited capacity of union leaders to impose altruism on e did to help relieve distress and

ous labour strife, often rooted in whatever governmental incomes policies prevailed. Above all the chairman has faced the wrath of his consumers amid the severe financial crises that have weakened both his management and the traditions of service of which employees were once so proud.

Whoever runs the Post Office, the largest of nationalized industries, has, rightly, to acknowledge the deep interest of consumers, who have witnessed falling standards and a deterioration in telecommunications, or whatever. The British care deeply about their Post Office, as the correspondence columns of newspapers regularly reflect. But it is unfortunate that the blame is not always pinned where it belongs.

Of course, it is not enough for the head of a state corporation to complain about his difficulties, real as they are. To his credit, Sir William has more than once fought for the investment and economic pricing that is so obviously needed to allay public criticism. His trade unions have stood with him, too. This is reason enough for Mr Benn to end the present uncertainty by reappointing the present chairman, who is otherwise due to leave his £23,100-a-year post in 30 days' time on the expiry of the present terms of appointment.

It should not be forgotten that Mr Benn has just exercised his newly-obtained powers, now the Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications has been abolished by the Prime Minister, to give directions to the corporation to prepare reports on further structural reform, a possible takeover of private enterprise manufacture of telecommunications equipment, and other matters. All this is an additional diversion of managerial time, better spent on putting the telephone system into the electronic era and pushing on with postal mechaniza-tion. A Post Office man all his working life, Sir William knows the vital tasks and he is needed to remind Mr Benn, and the others who will follow, that the corporation has statutory objectives with which no consumer will argue, except to point out that they seem to be ignored by governments which enact them and then get fretful when the board points this out.

Young offenders

From Mr Andrew Rutherford -

Sir, Adrian Liddell-Hart (letter May 28) says I distorted the Advisory Council on the Penal System's conclusion on the research evidence as to the effectivenes of non-custodial programmes for young offenders. My article (May 23) quoted from the report the research finding which the Council con-sidered most significant : that such programmes are no less effective than incarceration. It is encouraging that the Home Secretary and the majority of informed opinion are in agreement with the Council's view that the right direction is away from institu-tions. The central issue is the means by which this might be achieved A survey of those American states where real change in penal practice is being achieved leaves no doubt that the main initiative comes from top administrators of the agencies themselves. It is for this reason that the context for and imaginative leadership, which a separate youth authority would provide, must be created. This should be a vital consideration in the discussions now under way on the implementation of the

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Slowing down the rate of inflation

From Mr G. D. N. Worswick Sir, I would like to bring forward for public discussion some of the points made in the recent appraisal of the economy published in the Economic Review—points which I feel may have been overlooked.

feel may have been overlooked.

We argued that there is now considerable danger that present rates inflation could get built into our economy and society which would mean that prices doubled every five years. We thought that it would help to harden anti-inflationary policy, first, if the Government set itself a target figure for slowing down the rate of inflation; and secondly, if in its discussions and, secondly, if in its discussions with the trade unions it put down with the frade unions it put down figures for the likely consequences of different schemes and proposals.

It was in this context that we presented the calculations of the consequences of wage indexing. These calculations were put forward not so much to advocate indexation as to work out the numerical con-sequences of adopting such a scheme for the rate of price increases in the future. The conclusion was that, on almost any set of plausible assumptions about productivity and import prices, inflation, which we expect to be running over 15 per cent this year, would still be in double figures through 1975 but might be brought back into single figures by 1976. back into single figures by 1976.

It is, of course, not necessary that any index scheme should be on a percentage basis. The present 40p threshold amount is 1 per cent for the average wage, more than 1 per cent for the less well paid and less than 1 per cent for those above the average. Any number of automatic schemes is possible, although simplicity must have a strong appeal especially in a voluntary incomes policy. We certainly did not exclude special payments for special cases, but we made two points in this connexion. First, it makes no sense to have a number of different bodies adjudicating on different special cases; there must somewhere be a single authority to pronounce upon what is special and by how much. Secondly, it is not sensible for such a body to be able to grant additional payments without limit; it is an obvious requirement for the control of inflation that the total amount for such additional payments without limit; for such additional payments should be limited in relation to the state of the economy. Double figure inflation is already with us: if nothing is done it will become endemic. However moderate their tone and intent, arrangements too vague to be quantified will not be enough. Yours sincerely,

G. D. N. WORSWICK, Director, National Institute of Economic and Social Research, 2 Dean Trench Street, Smith Square, SW1

British in Oman From Mr Tom Stacey

Sir, The letter (June 14) on Oman from Mr Stan Newens and his friends reads here as if they imagine all the world to be England. They would be the first to complain if we had made it so. Oman was never a colony of ours, or even nearly a colony other than in the mind of Curzon. The British never once intervened other than by diplomacy in Oman's affairs. We suppressed the slave trade, but we respected the Islamic institutions and independence of a people who wished to be themselves a ardently as Mr Newens' voters at Harlow.

Maybe Mr Newens' vision of the highest political morality is our species of democracy, with its trade unions and opposition parties and press perpetually on the rampage. One day such blessings may descend on Oman. All such democratic institutions were neaped by us upon neighbouring Aden, before it fell to the last Labour Govern-ment to release it into full freedom as the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen. Today, ro few years later, only trayesties of these democratic institutions survive. Today the people of "South Yemen" are without either recognizable British institutions or recognizable British institutions or recognizable prices. zable British institutions or recognizable Arab ones. In the name of Socialist democracy, many of the men who worked within the in tish system have been shot or impri-soned without trial or forced to flee. The country is a by word for erratic tyranny, kept going by the USSR and Cuba and a rivelrous China. It is these bad neighbours who feed the ailing rebellion in Oman's Dhofar province, where a few British regular and ex-regular soldiers are helping Omani forces. One chooses one's political moralities. Here enlightment grows under a benevolent monarchy acquainted with both worlds. Education spreads, opportunity for selfadvancement abounds. Justice pre-vails and is even-handed. It is an ancient country of a unique culture awakening fast to its potential of authority and spirit as Tudor Britain did. If a handful of British military specialists can help pre-serve Oman from factitious subversion by a politically neurotic outside world while it finds its feet, they will have done a greater service here than a legion of Mr. Newens' democratic missionaries. Yours faithfully, TOM STACEY, Harrat Dakbil.

Inquiries into take-overs

Panel on Take-overs and Mergers Sir, Mr Basil Jeuda (June 15) misses the whole point. Few people, I imagine, would dispute that it is for imagine, would dispute that it is for the state through Parliament to make the laws and to provide the means for their enforcement. The City Panel is not concerned with the enforcement of law but, as the Introduction to the Code makes clear, with the enforcement of good business standards in take-over transactions: Mr Jeuda appears unable to distinguish between the two. He says that he is "sure that the Panel is far from happy with many recent cases that have come before it" and quotes three examples: CST luvestments/Grendon Trust. Combined English Stores/David Greig and McMahon/Maclencse.

English Stores/David Greig and McMahon/Maclehose.

In each of the first two cases the Panel issued public statements setting out at length all the relevant facts and its conclusions together with the reasons for those conclusions. If Mr Jeuda has taken the opportunity to read those statements perhaps he would care to say what difhaps he would care to say what dif-ferent conclusions a Companies Commission would or could have reached. No public statement has yet been issued in connexion with the Maclehose case because the issues involved in that case are the subject of litigation in the High Court: I am unable to understand how Mr Jeuda finds it possible to express a view on a matter about which he can have little or no know ledge. Each of these cases involved general principles of business ethics which it would be impossible to translate into an effective legal form capable of enforcement by a statutory body. Mr Jeuda says that the Labour Party Working Group were con-cerned as to whether the Panel could monitor adequately insider trading and warehousing. As Lord Shaw-cross pointed out in his letter (June 5) these "abuses" arise from the deficiencies in company law and not from any shortcomings of the Panel. their joint memorandum sent to the Department of Trade and Industry last year, the Panel and the Stock Exchange made firm recom-mendations with regard to each of these "abuses". In that memo-randum the two bodies recognized that insider trading could only be effectively dealt with by legislation and recommended that it should be made a criminal offence. Stock Ex The problem with warehousing, as June 19.

From the Director-General of the Mr Jeuda must be well aware, is one of definition—a problem for which no one has yet been able to find an acceptable and workable solution although the revised edition of the Code makes a creditable attempt. Certainly the Green Paper makes no attempt to do so: it merely states that "it must be accepted that there will be difficulties in defining whether separate shareholders are acting in concert and therefore difficult (sic) also in enforcing the law".

Mr Jeuda refers to trading and employment undertakings implying that the Panel's monitoring of these is inadequate and that a body such as the proposed Companies Commission would be more effective in this respect. How it would be Mr Jeuda does not make clear. In practice undertakings are very rarely given in takeover offers, but I know of no case where such an undertaking has been given and has subsequently been broken.

As for profit forecasts the Panel As for profit forecasts, the Panel conducted over a period of two end a hait years an exhaustive follow-up of all forecasts made in takeover situations and indicated in its 1972 annual report that this study had shown a very high degree of accuracy in profit forecasts. Since 1972 we have pursued a policy of examining forecasts on a random basis and there has been no sign of any falling-off in the standard of forecasting accuracy. My main criticism of the authors of the Green Paper is that, having made up their minds in advance to reject the concept of self-regulation, they then proceeded to patch to-gether a threadbare quilt of real and imaginary abuses to justify the estab-lishment of a Companies Commission based in many respects on the Securities and Exchange Commission—a body nor notably successful in policing the sort of abuses of which they complain. They totally ignore the very considerable achievement of the Panel in establishing and enforcing a standard of conduct in takeovers unequalled in any other market in the world (including the tightly regulated market in the United States). And this at no cost to the public purse. Regrettably there is no one so blind as he who will not see and no one so deaf as he who will not hear. Yours faithfully,

JOHN HULL, PO Box No 226, Stock Exchange Building, EC2.

Policing the ocean From Mr David Knox, Conservative

MP for Leek
Sir, Your leading article about the United Nations and the management of ocean space (June 18) contains a most doubtful proposition: that "the international system most likely to secure those (British) interests is one which acknowledges the position of coastal states as chief claimants to their waters and as the primary agencies waters and as the primary agencies of enforcement". Among the British interests to be secured you quite rightly list "avoidance of occasions of conflict over disputed claims and a division of wealth from the oceans which is equitable towards poor and land-locked states".

There are about 50 coastal states with big coast lines and of these 10 or 12 are among the richest countries in the world. Under the alibi of "coastal" it has been calalibi of "coastai" it has been cal-culated that the United States for instance, will acquire 10 per cent of the total area, which is about equal to half the entire land-mass of the planet. Australia with a 20,000 mile coast-line will also acquire a huge zone. With this kind of territorial acquisition by some states, there will indeed be disputes with those who get less or even nothing at all.

Vours sincerely, DAVID KNOX, Chairman, Parlia-mentary Group for World Government. House of Commons, June 18.

Legislation on lotteries From Dr E. Moran

Sir, I should like to support the views expressed by the Bishop of London and others concerning the legislation on lotteries (Letter,

It has become increasingly evident that some of the serious effects of the liberalized gambling legislation a decade ago resulted from the artificial stimulation of demand which could not be prevented because the control was inadequate. In view of this, it is a matter of some concern that the Local Revenue Bill, which would allow local authorities to promote lot teries, should now have been rushed through the House of Commons.

This is particularly so since the purpose of this ill-considered piece of private member's legislation is not to meet the demand of the gambling public, which is the usual purpose of relaxing the gambling laws, but to provide a means of extra revenue for local authorities. It is evident that this will only be achieved if there is a stimulation of demand so that there will be an increase in the total amount of gambling. An unfortunate consequence of this state of affairs is that it has an adverse effect on the incidence of "compulsive" gambling.

There is a great deal to be said for allowing the community rather than commercial interests to benefit more effectively from the profits to be made from gambling. However a scheme which will enable this to occur must incorporate adequate controls to guard against misuse. The Report of the Interdepartmental Working Party on Lotteries published in December 1973 proposed various ways of doing so. Although one would not accept all the conclusions in that report, it is vital that there should be more discussion of these before the matter is finalized.

While there is no legislative means whereby the "compulsive" gambler can be protected from the harmful effects of his propensities, it should nevertheless be recognized that an important function of gambling legislation is to ensure that he is not exploited. Yours faithfully,

Hongkong wage rates

Sir, Judge Sparrow in his letter of June 12 apparently questions the accuracy of my reference to a skilled worker's average wage in Hong Kong being about £25 a week. If Judge Sparrow or any other person with an interest in the subject cares to visit the library in my office, I shall be glad to let him inspect the published statistical information upon which my factual statement was based.

My earlier letter (June 12) corrected a blatant misrepresentation about Hong Kong wage rates. I am also glad to be able to put the Club of Ten's remarks about child labour into perspective. Of course there may be illegal use of child labour in Hong Kong, but it is the subject of vigorous and continuous attack by the Labour Inspectorate of the Hong Kong Labour Department.

For example, in two surveys dur-For example, in two surveys during the past six or seven months over 10,000 factories, or half the factories in Hong Kong, employing 225,000 persons, were inspected and only 84 children were found below the legal age of factory employment. Prisoners in the Middle East

From Mr B. G. Reubem Sir. Thank you for the imaginative article by Felicia Langer of the Israeli New Communist party about the maltreatment of prisoners in Israeli jails. I look forward to a similar article in your columns by a British Communist lawyer about British Communist lawyer about British atrocities in Ireland, not to mention the recent "murder" of Kevin Gately. No doubt you wou'd also publish articles about maltreatment of prisoners in Syria and the Soviet Union, if they were allowed Soviet Union, if they were allowed to have lawyers who were permitted to write articles.

Miss Langer's article contained a curious phrase. She wrote "During the years of my practice, I saw more than once marks of beating on the faces and bodies of my clients." What does this mean? Does she not know how often she saw them? If it had been many times, she would surely have said so, and even three times could have qualified as "several". Presumably "more than once" means twice (in all those years?) those years?)

Yours etc. B. G. REUBEM, University of Surrey, Guildford.

From Mr John de Frece Sir, Felicia Langer's allegations (June 17) may or may not be true. However, the question of torture in the Middle East is not confined to the occupied territories. The situation of Jews in Arab lands leaves much to be desired. The Syrian fewish community, especially, con-tinues to suffer unrelenting persetinues to suffer unrelenting persecution and abuse.

In the last few days, I have received information that two Jews—Yosef Shalah and Azour Zalta—have been convicted on a "framed" charge of the murder of four Jewish mirls attempting to flee from Syria. The fare of these two Jews is at present fate of these two Jews is at present undetermined. Meanwhile, it is a fact that whenever a lew escapes Syria, his family are immediately tortured as a reprisal. The Syrian Jewish community suffers from restrictions which are a direct reproduction of laws enacted in Nazi Germany and prewar Poland.

Break-up of farms

From Mr Oliver Lever Sir, Lord Porchester (June 13) is right to suggest that fragmentation of farms be prevented. Section 86 of the Agriculture Act, 1947. which came into operation but no into force, was designed for thir purpose. Its reenactment would no only stop farms being broken ... but would also force sales of uni and so depress the present inflativalue of agricultural land. Mr Eric Varley, the Secretary of State for Energy, said yesterday, that if a 10 per cent saving in Britain's energy consumption could be made by the 1980s, the reduction in fuel would be worth about £600m a year at present prices.

He said that it was of great importance that all areas of consumption where improve-ments could be made should be identified and that the "interest and cooperation of the community as a whole should be engaged and sustained". The increasing prospect of Britain becoming self-sufficient in energy did not make energy savings any less important, or any less beneficial to the economy", he said.

This ambitious expansion by Warburg-Paribas of its American interests comes just 14 months after its formation as a jointly-owned company by S. G. Warburg, the British merchant bank and Compagnie Finanière de Paris et des Pays-Bas SA. of France.

The merger will be effected by Becker taking over Warburg-Paribas who will inject addi-tional capital into the new group and own about half the capital, expected to be "in excess of $50m". Detailed terms have still to be finalized and the whole deal needs the consent of the New York Stock Exchange and of the United Kingdom and French authorities.

Becker, a private company with 250 mainly employee shareholders, the largest being Mr Paul Judy, its chief executive, employs 1,450 people and is re-presented in 10 cities, including London and Geneva, apart from its principal offices in Chicago and New York.

Founded in 1893, Becker is a member of the New York Stock Exchange and of regional stock exchanges in the United States. lecker, a consistent profit carner, is second only to Goldman Sachs as a dealer in com-mercial paper, $25,000m of which it handled in 1973. On top of this Becker runs a funds valuation service, where clients can compare the performances of the money managers.

Warburg-Paribas, which has a net worth of $10m, will apart from fresh capital bring its siz-able international business into the merger with Becker, with whom it has dealt for some time.

The import unit value index rose by 61 per cent in March to make the rise for the first quarter of 1974 over the fourth quarter of 1973 no less than 17 per cent. The main reason for this was clearly the higher price Nevertheless.

The figures also throw some light on the sharp rise in exports in the first quarter. In value terms they were over 11 per cent higher than in the fourth quarter of 1973. Eight per cent this was attributable to higher prices, leaving the volume increase at slightly over 3 per cent. Moreover, exports were slightly depressed in the fourth quarter last year.

This makes recent export performance less encouraging than at first appeared; due perhaps, commodity prices. This, com- to the result of three-day bined with a strong tendency for working.

American trade deficit in May $776.9m after April surplus

From Frank Vogl Washington, June 25 The United States had a deficit in foreign trade of $776.9m (about £323m) in May, after having a surplus of $92.8m in April, according to season-ally adjusted figures published by the Department of Com-merce here today. The deficit clearly reflects the severe strain on the United States economy, where demand so exceeds available supply. Manufacturers are holding back exporting to supply the home market and imports of manufactured goods are rapidly increasing.

The seasonally adjusted May import total of $8,406.6m was the highest recorded and com-pared with $8,141.2m in the previous month. In contrast, the May export total of $7,629.7m was the lowest monthly level since February and compared with $8,234m in

The American trade surplus for the first five months of this ear has now declined to just 54m, against a surplus recorded in the comparative 1973 period of $1,677m. Exports in this period have risen by 30 per cent to $91,810m, while imports have increased by 33 per cent for 20 months. This was due primarily to a reduction in sales of machinery and transport decline in export sales from trade.

April to May of over $200m to $2,825m. But imports of manufactured goods showed the biggest gain during the month, rising by $124m in May over April to $1,371.1m. These figures reflect the growing shortages of supply of manufactured goods, a factor which has long worried the United States Administration as being a prime cause of the high

This factor appears to be leading to a significant erosion of the American foreign trade position and is an aspect of the situation that will be studied in some depth by the new Committee on Shortages, established by President Nixon and to be run by the Council of Econo-mic Advisers.

The oil situation has greatly affected the United States trade picture. Without the sharp rises in world oil prices there would now be a healthy trade surplus. But the comparison between the April and May figures shows that total United States energy imports in the last month were actually lower by about $15m thin the record level of $2,213.4m seen in April. The almost four-fold increase in energy import costs has long been considered by economists

The May figures show the first monthly decline in exports for 20 months. This was as certain to produce an American trade deficit this year.

This disturbing forces. latest monthly figures, how-ever, reveal that an evident of machinery and transport deterioration is now visible in equipment, especially electrical the pattern of the balance in items. This category shows a the non-energy areas of foreign

Holland to step up its check on Roche group

By Malcolm Brown
The Dutch Government is to intensify its investigation of Hoffmann-La Roche, the Swissbased multi-national drugs group which was ordered last year by the British Govern-ment to make big cuts in the prices of the tranquillizers Librium and Valium.

It is expected that within the next 10 days the Dutch competi-tion committee — roughly equivalent to the British Monopolies Commission-will be instructed to start an examination of Roche's activities in the Netherlands

The Dutch operation is run through Hoffmann-La Roche (Netherlands), which imports the drugs Librium and Valium in their fully made-up form from a German manufacturing subsidiary of the group.

Dutch interest in the activi-ties of Hoffmann-La Roche started last year shortly after the British Government published its order demanding cuts of 60 per cent and 75 per cent in the 1970 prices of Librium and Valium.

The Dutch Government's move coincides with a critical stage in Hoffmann-La Roche's battle in Britain. Within the next few weeks, the House of Lords should deliver its judgment on an appeal by the group against a ruling in the Appea Court. The Appeal Court ruled that the Government was entitled to an interlocutory injunction preventing Roche raising its prices to the pre-order level without giving an undertaking in damages to compensate Roche if the group wins its pending

The group says that it stands to lose £8m if the House of Lords upholds the Appeal Court decision.

PORTSMOUTH AND SUNDERLAND NEWSPAPERS, LIMITED

THE HON. RICHARD STOREY'S REVIEW FOR THE YEAR ENDED MARCH 31, 1974

On December 22, 1973, the one hundredth anniversary of The Echo, Sunderland, which his grandfather started as the foundation of the business, Lord Buckton, who worked for the business for 54 years and was its Chairman for 49 years, retired. He was appointed President and, having had the honour of being elected to succeed him as Chairman, I record my profound thanks to him for the great wisdom and energy with which he served and inspired the Company.

The relatively disappointing result of the second half of

The relatively disappointing result of the second half of the year compared with the exceptionally good one for the first half, was due to the decline in the abnormally high demand for advertising and the rapid rise in the costs of our production—particularly newsprint. To combat this adverse effect nearly all the Company's advertising rates and news-paper cover prices were increased in March. Our supplies of newsprint are reasonably secure but their cost is now rising steeply. While our own price increases and the current encouraging revival in advertising will help to offset newsprint and other costs, it may be that further increases, which we believe the quality of our papers could sustain and the terms of current legislation would permit, will prove necessary.

During the year negotiations were concluded for the lease of the new site in Sunderland, the building there of premises—work on which has now started, and the manufacture of the presses. It is hoped that full production on the site will start before the end of 1975. Success in this development should not be so incalculable as it was for its pioneering forerunner in Portsmouth nearly ten years ago. Nevertheless if the provincial press generally, and our development in parti-cular, is to avoid the economic instability, manifested again recently, of the national press, and to benefit properly from the ever larger capital expenditure necessary to purchase new plant, it is essential that an agreement with the trade unions be reached nationally, or if necessary, locally, on the use of the most modern composing equipment such as has been used in many offices outside the United Kingdom for Portsmouth continued to produce the kind of results which our investment there entitled us to expect and for which we all hoped: the efficiency of the whole staff was maintained, printing for others under contract increased, and the circulation of The News and the weekly papers rose.

In Sunderland training for, and the introduction of, some ancillary equipment has begun and, despite the extra demands now imposed on and withstood with forbcarance by the staff in this office, sales of The Echo increased. A modern letterpress printing machine was transferred from Portsmouth to Hartlepool where production of The Mail with its resilient circulation and buoyant advertising is now proceeding well. I repeat what was said last year, "progress has been made by Portsmouth and Sunderland News Shops Limited in acquiring suitable businesses", and many of these "have only recently started trading and it is to the future that we look for their effective contribution to our profits". I now add that this has been a difficult year for this retail business the normal trading of which has been much constrained by legislation on prices. An otherwise good year for labour relations contained the actions of two trade unions which, apparently attempting to influence present and previous government to allow pay settlements in excess of "Phase Three", interfered with our

the Company. In neither attempt was anything achieved and we must now hope that such politically motivated strikes will no longer occur. The Company obtained a 74% share in the equity of the company successful in acquiring the licence to operate commercial radio in the Typeside and Wearside area. It is hoped that the Portsmouth and Teesside consortia, or which the Company is a member, will be successful in obtaining licences production-although they had no grievance specifically with

Throughout the Company all concerned have worked energetically and enthusiastically to maintain high editorial standards, provide proper use of existing machinery, stimulate sales and advertising, and adapt to the needs of the future. I thank everybody for this excellent co-operation.

Finally, I record with sorrow the death of a former Director, Mr Stephen Furness, who gave such loyal and valuable service to the Company for many years.

Arbuthnot Latham Holdings Limited

Highlights from the Statement made by Mr. A.R.C. Arbuthnot, Chairman

After ten years as chairman, Sir John Prideaux has relinquished the chair, due to his other commitments. I know that shareholders will join with me in gratitude for the leadership he has displayed for so long. We are all delighted that Sir John is remaining a director of your company. We were glad to elect Mr. Nigel Robson, who has been chairman of Arbuthnot Latham & Co., Limited for the last five years, as deputy chairman of the holding company.

The profit of the group, after taxation and transfers to inner reserves, came to £787,000 as against £778,000 last year. A final dividend at the maximum rate permitted by the Government is recommended. The considerable increase seen in the bank's profits for the previous year has been maintained with net profits of £477,000. Deposits show a marginal growth but there is an appreciable increase in liquidity in the bank's balance sheer. There has been a marked rise in acceptances.

Our associated banking companies in South East Asia, Kenya and The Channel Islands, in which we participate with The Chartered Bank and The Standard Bank, have all shown encouraging progress during the year, whilst we have continued to work closely with The Philadelphia National Bank and The Toronto-Dominion Bank, who are shareholders, and with Banque Worms.

Arbuthnot Export Services is developing business in many parts of the world in the short-term and medium-term finance of exports. In the field of insurance, Arbuthnot Insurance Services continues to develop well, and Landauer & Co. (Fibres) has produced escellent results.

The financial outlook in the world today is cloudy and the future is hard to forecast. I feel confident, however, that the team in whose hands lies the continued development of your group will take full advantage of every opportunity that presents itself.

The Annual General Meeting will be held on Friday, 12th July 1974 at 12:30 p.m. Copies of the Report and Accounts are available on request to the Secretary, Arbuthnot Latham Holdings Limited, 37 Queen Street, London EC4R 1BY.

Assets of about 7.7 billion US$ make PKbanken the largest bank in Scandinavia.

The new PKbanken will have a de-centralized organization, which facilitates close contact with the business world. An extensive and well placed branch network in Sweden will guarantee a high level of service.

This makes the new PK banken a force to be reckoned with when it comes to banking contacts in Sweden. We have both the will and the resources.

Stock Exchange opens new checking system

The first phase of the Stock Exchange's new computer-based settlement system, concerned with the checking of bargains, is now complete and in daily use. Mr J. Dundas Hamilton, a deputy chairman of the exchange, said on Monday that this stage had been completed on schedule and within budget, on the basis of plans announced in November, 1972.

Previously, brokers and lobbers, having dealt on the floor of the exchange, prepared lists of bargains which were checked manually the following checking room at Blossoms Inn. This room has been closed and firms now report bargain details to a central IBM computer. Those firms which previously used manual or part-mechanized methods are now linked to the computer via remote Olivetti terminals; those which use their own computers, or bureau services, sub-mir the data on magnetic tape or punched cards.

These will be followed by a fourth stage, known as TALISMAN (Transfer Accounting and Lodgement for Inves-tors, Stock Management for Jobbers). This will introduce more radical changes in

Traditionally, settlement in-volves the individual exchange of documents between the parties to a bargain; individual recording of changes of owner-ship of shares, payment of stamp duty and preparation of transfer documents.

The work associated with processes in London it is estimated, occupies alone. 7.000 people in member firms' offices, at a cost of about f30m a year. A further £60m is spent by country firms, company registrars, banks and investment institutions.

Through TALISMAN, much of this work will be handled by the Stock Exchange computer centre. Each jobber will have a running account in a nominee ances will be adjusted to correspond with the bargains he makes in the exchange.

Preparation of lists for com-pany registrars and of transfer-documents and the payment of stamp duty to the Inland Revenue will also be handled by TALISMAN.

Expected benefits of centralization include a reduction of clerical work and associated delays in delivery of stock to buyers; a smoothing of work-flow for registrars; and a simpier and more acturate account-ing system for member firms. Net benefits of about £4m a year are expected.

First phase of TALISMAN, a prototype system covering 10 per cent of all stock, is due for completion in 1976. The full system should come into operation the following year. Total estimated cost is £8m to the end.

He spoke against the back-ground of new forecasts for the period up to 1976 published yesterday by the forecasting panel of the two EDCs. These show clearly that the recession INVESTMENTS During 1973, we received and accepted a cash offer for our shares in Philblack Limited and made a small profit over book value. We now have two investments of significant size, one in British Titan Ltd. and one in 3M United Kingdom Ltd.

British Titan continues to trade very successfully, and our decision to increase the amount of our investment in 1972 has been fully justified. We do not consolidate our share of profits but in 1973 that share amounted to £1,330,179 before tax (£400,748 in 1972). Including the imputed tax credit the British Titan dividend included in our accounts amounted to £273,090. We are confident of further progress by British Titan in 1974 and in the future.

Since our investment in 3M is in preference shares of the U.K. company convertible into Ordinary shares of its U.S.A. parent, we have had to balance the long-term growth prospects for our underlying equity investment with the fact that the income we receive from the preference shares is fixed at a level well below what we could earn elsewhere. We have therefore in April 1974 sold half of our holding in 3M for a net consideration (before tax) of 11,917,000. The proceeds are at present earning interest on deposit, but it is intended that they will be used as opportunity arises to further the development of the Group.

TRADING Our trading companies prospered in 1973. The principal subsidiary, R. W. Greeff & Co., Ltd., had a very good year and is continuing to make progress in 1974. Increased profits were also carned by SOAB Ltd. (50% owned) and Barking Zinc Oxide Ltd. (130% owned)

PROSPECTS Forecasting the future is an increasingly hazardous pastime. However, the company today is stronger than it has ever been. We have shown that we can thrive in difficult times; we have considerable cash assets; our major investments are prospering; and we have a strong and united management team. Above all, we have the ability and the determination to grow both in our trading and in our investment activity; and we look to the future with confidence and with pleasure.

In from water rates and charges shows an increase of £46 due to normal growth and an increase in metered income

Stockholders will note that the descriptions of Capital have been altered in order to recognize the tex changes a out of the Finance Act 1972. Thus, the new dividend is shown first and the old rate in parenthesis immediately wards. It must be conceded that this approach is cumben but it should assist the layman in identifying his stockhold

Building activity in the area has been on a lower for the last two years, due to various factors, but I se reason why it will not return to normal when the present t tainties have gone. As a consequence the water consum has not increased recently as much as estimated. Last I mentioned that due to lack of rainfell and thus lower t ground water levels, an appeal was made to consumer economy in garden watering in the hopes of avoiding n tions on this supply. I am pleased to say that the resi to this, coupled with kind weather during the summer,

Net capital expenditure for the year at £123,167 was lowest amount for many years and followed a low figure the previous year. This has been achieved only by copruning, helped by the lack of activity in new housing to I have just referred, and also spurred on by the current interest rates. This situation cannot last much longer full supply is to be maintained and stockholders must e to see increased capital expenditure in the coming years

It will be seen from the Notes to the Accounts that 260,000 will be spent on the writing of computer progra and systems. This expenditure was caused by the ne replace the computer which has been in use since 1966 the impossibility of transferring the old programmes to an computer. The opportunity has been taken to improve existing methods which should greatly enhance the ma existing methods which should greatly entance the ma-ment information system and cut down the time need answer consumers' enquiries about their accounts. Any puterisation is full of pitfalls and the changeover of the pany's three major applications, during the last 12 m without causing undue inconvenience to third parties, great tribute to the hard work of the office depart concerned.

NEW WATER ACT

The Water Act 1973 received the Royal Assent in 1973. As a result, on 1st April, 1974 ten Regional Authorities have taken over the functions of the existing Authorities. Water Undertakings and Sewerage and Selfisposal Authorities. The Statutory Water Companies wicharge their existing duties through agency agreement; the appropriate Authority. The Company has concluded an agreement with the Thames Water Authority so the Company will discharge ter the Thames Water Authority water supply function in our area of supply. The authority water supply function in our area of supply. The authorit be assured of the Company's fullest support.

One of the first positive results of the new Water that there will be one identical pension scheme available. the water industry. It is based on the scheme for Authorities. This will remove a distinction which exists be differing classes of employees in our present pension ar meds. Furthermore, it should create greater individu opportunity for those working in the water industry as a by enabling employees to change jobs without loss of pringits.

RATES AND CHARGES

Accurate forecasting of income and expenditure a present time is virtually impossible due to the political tainties, both at home and abroad, energy costs, threagreements and the overall rate of inflation. However present estimates show an appreciable deficit for 1974-7 this, coupled with the actual deficit for 1973-74, made a stantial increase in water rates and charges essential for the coupled with the couple of the continued financial health of the Company.

Consequently the Directors decided to increase the rate from 4.2p to 5.2p in the £ on 1st April, 1974 an charge for supplies by meter from 32.5p to 40p per gallons from the June quarter 1974. These increases ar absolute minimum which could be applied. However, would already appear in some instances to have been over the within Stance. by events. They have been calculated to be within Stage-the Counter Inflation Legislation.

CHAIRMANSHIP

On a personal note, in February of this year I comp 50 years of service with the Company and it is my into to resign as your Chairman after this Annual General Me it is my belief that with all the changes that are taking participated and I have no hesitation in remending to my colleagues that Mr. P. D. Davey, F.C.A., but successor. He has been a director since 1970 and, but his professional capacity and as a director of other companies, has been associated with the water industry many years. For myself, my fellow Board members indicated that they would wish me to continue as an orce Director and I will be most happy to accede to their relationship. to continue to serve the Company.

TRIBUTE TO STAFF

The last two or three years have been a period of u tainty for the Company, due to the many changes to place around us as well as internally, and all in a period acute inflation. These changing times have brought additionable to our staff, not least of which has been the untainty about their future. I am sure that I am expressing view of all the Directors when I say how much both the sholders and the consumers owe to their loyalty and faithful and I thank them accordingly.

I hope that we may now have a few years of stability we can concentrate on further improving our efficiency our service to consumers.

'The Report and Accounts were adopted and the divid recommended approved. The appointment of Mr. G. M. Sv as a Director was confirmed. The retiring Director, Mr. N.

throughout the publishing in-dustry: were assessing the effects of last week's labour stoppages. Among the publications worst hit is IPC Business Press's Nurs-ing Mirror. This was one of the magazines transferred from the company's ill-fated Southwark printing plant. After several months of non-publication before the closing down of the Southwark works. Nursing Mirror reappeared again on March 22. But after only 13 issues production has again been disrupted and IPC executives say there is now no chance that the issue due to appear on June 21 will be saved. The dispute hit IPC's women's magazines at a time when their advertisement sales have more than recovered from the doldruns after the intro-duction of commercial televi-

Mr Patrick Barnes, the divi-sion's advertisement director, says that revenue between April: 1 and June 22 is only 3 per cent below last year's ex-ceptionally high level. The biggest growth has been in food advertisements with manufac-turers turning increasingly to women's magazines.

IPC is still assessing how the stoppages will affect revenue. But it seemed certain last night that at least one issue of three high-circulation women's week-lies will be lost.

Insurance deadlock plea

By Clifford Webb A motor trade association yesterday called for the establishment of an independent body to break the nine-mouthold deadlock between the trade and the insurance companies over the cost of accident repairs In a statement clearly aimed at tomorrow's annual meeting of the British Insurance Asso-ciation, the Vehicle Builders and Repairers Association said the present impasse could not be allowed to continue. Sir Kenneth Keith

The Annual General Meeting of Philip Hill Investment Trust Limited will be held on 10th July, in London. The following is the circulated statement of the Chairman, Sir Kenneth Keith:

The Past Year This has been a difficult year for investment generally. The reasons are well-known and culminated in the change of Government at home, and the recent budget resulting in the F.T. 30 Share Index reaching its lowest point for 12 years immediately after our year-end. The F.T. All Share Index fell by no less than 37-6 per cent. Markets in the United States of America also disappointed, with the Standard & Poor's Composite Index falling 12.8 per cent. if adjusted for exchange rates and 2.5 per cent. if adjusted for both exchange rates and the dollar premium.

We increased liquidity during the year both here and in the United States of America in order both to take advantage of higher short-term interest rates ruling in the United Kingdom and to off-set increases in the cost of Euro-dollar borrowings.

Revenue Gross revenue for the year increased by £768,000 to £4,861,000. In spite of the increase in income, the taxation charge is reduced because of the lower rate of income tax. Net earnings, therefore, in spite of increased expenses and foreign currency loan interest, were up by £359,000 to £2,166,000. The Directors declared an interim dividend of 1.75p during the year and are now able to recommend the payment of a final dividend of 2-65p per share. Allowing for the fact that the rates of tax imputed to these dividends were 30 per cent. for the interim and will be 33 per cent, for the final, the equivalent gross distribution for the year is 25-82 per cent. compared with 24.5 per cent. for the previous year.

Investments Gross assets of the Trust at 31st March 1974, including investments at valuation, after deducting current liabilities, but before deducting prior charges, amounted to £86,988,000. The net asset value of the ordinary shares, deducting prior charges at par, was 138½p compared with 217½p per share at 31st March 1973. The Trust publishes its net asset values each month in the Association of Investment Trust Companies' advertisement in The Financial Times on the third Friday and also in The Times the following day. The above holdings accounted for 43 per cent. of the market value of the total portfolio.

The investment classification table included with the Accounts shows that 68-78 per cent. of the portfolio is in the United Kingdom, the figure being somewhat less than that of a year ago because of sales and because of the lower level of the United Kingdom Stock Market. However, I should like to point out that many of the companies under the United Kingdom Classification have substantial interests and assets

The North Sea I have mentioned previously our 43 per cent. stake in North Sea Oil & Gas Company, which has a 5 per cent interest in the 'Numac/Siebens' Consortium and its licence for Block No. 9/4 in the North Sea: drilling of a trial well has not yet started but plans are in hand for this to take place in due course. We have also taken a 44-2 per cent. stake in Second North Sea Oil & Gas Company which has a 12.7 per cent. share in a new 'Challenger Oil' Consortium. North Sea Oil & Gas Company also has a 4 per cent, stake in this new Consortium which intends to bid for licences under the next round of applications.

Subsidiary Dealing and Management Companies During the year we set up a separate company, Philip Hill (Management) Limited, to provide the investment and administrative services previously undertaken by Hill Samuel & Co. Limited for this Trust and other Investment Trust Companies. The new company is wholly-owned by our 51 per cent. subsidiary, C.G.M. Securities Limited, as explained in the Directors' Report, and since the year-end has moved into its separate office at 8 Waterloo Place, London, S.W.1.

The Current Year There have rarely been so many uncertainties, both political and economic, as face us in the current year. At home, we do not know when there will be another General Election but it is clear that a minority Government cannot exist indefinitely. There is the threat of further taxation measures which on top of those already introduced in this year's Finance Bill and bearing in mind the current rate of inflation are likely to affect savings adversely. There is the possibility, but one must hope that it is only a faint one, that the United Kingdom will renegotiate itself out of the Common Market. There is the likelihood of a fresh round of high wage settlements and further industrial disruption this autumn and winter.

Abroad, international liquidity and balance of payments problems caused by the oil crisis have still to be resolved. There is little sign that the abnormally high inflationary pressures here and abroad are being brought within reasonable control. Taking all these factors into account, together with severe dividend restriction at home, now some eighteen months old, there can be little ground for confidence that the equity market will revive until current uncertainties are to some extent removed. Your Directors have continued to increase liquidity as opportunities occurred in the United Kingdom and in our Euro-dollar loans. I am, however, reasonably confident that we can maintain the new rate of dividend for the current year.

CBI to thrash out attitude towards Royal Commission on Income and Wealth

By Maurice Corina Industrial Editor

An urgent meeting is being convened by the Confederation of British Industry tomorrow to thrash out employers' artitudes towards the government proposals for a Royal Commission on the distribution of income and wealth.

Many leading employers' organizations and representa-tives of top CBI committees are to take part in the talks. The urgency stems from the fact that Mr Michael Foot, Secretary of State for Employment, has set a deadline of Friday for receiving abjections and opinions on his cently-circulated consultative Gocument, suggesting a standing commission to inquire into earned and unearned personal incomes and the distribution of unofficial reactions First from employers suggest a measure of hostility, in spite of government assurances that the terms of any specific references to the new commission would

One specific objection is that a commission would duplicate much of the work of other official agencies considering in comes and related problems.

Mr Foot's specific suggestion that an early reference for the new commission might be top incomes, including all forms of directors' remuneration, is regarded as "another sop to the trade unions".

It is also pointed out that the exclusion from consideration of taxation, benefits, and subsidies from the commission, if it must be set up, would detract from the validity of any reports or recommendations.

Sir, One of the more noticeable facts brought to light by the Mathys Committee report on trade marks is that 36 years later the 1938 Trade Marks Act is still working so well. Industry and commerce have seen some. drastic changes in that time but this Act appears to have weathered them all. Well, not quite all, because the Mathys Committee recommended a number of sensible, if not very farreaching, reforms.
One change which was not recommended and which was, so far as I am aware, pressed on the committee by the majority of the organizations submitting evidence is for a so-called "sup-plementary" register of used but unregistered trade marks. It is presently taking well over a year to get a trade mark registered and this is just too long for some traders to wait before knowing if any other proprietor has preempted their ideas for new product names. RECORD YEAR

Manufacturer and supplier of Motor Components and accessories and hydraulic equipment

Points from the statement of chairman Mr. J. W. Hartley

Pre-tax profits for 1973 at a record level of £1,214,000 compared with £1,101,000 for 1972. Turnover increased from £6,555,000 to £7,751,000. Dividend increased to the equivalent of 19,067% compared with 18.214%.

A professional revaluation of properties has resulted in a surplus of £731,000 which effectively raises the asset value to 26p per share.

Sales so far in the current year are ahead of the same period a year ago. The economic climate makes any attempt at DIVIDEND Your directors will recommend a final dividend of 2.2375p per share not (8.95%) which, together with the interim stready paid, will total 2.5p (10%) for the year.

* PARENT COMPANY OPERATIONS The value of sales is now almost £3 million, an increase of 29% compared with 1972/73. All main production units are now operating on a 4-shift, 7-day week basis and great efforts were made by all concerned to counteract the serious effects of the recent Electricity and Fuel shortages.

OVERSEAS OPERATIONS Problems in South Africa have now been resolved and all units are now operating profitably. In the first year of collaboration, our Japanese associates Nihon Kagaku Kogyo Co. THE MERCANTILE AND GENERAL REINSURANCE COMPANY LTD

Mr. H. K. Goschen reports on a year of progress

In his review of 1973 Mr. H. K. Goschen, Chairman of the Mercantile and General Reinsurance Company Limited, reports on a year of progress in several important directions. On the General side the satisfactory results derive in the main from underwriting year 1972 left open last year and now completed. The year was one in which we were able to plough back some surplus into our reserves and reverse the trend of recent years. We are made fully aware of the need for a strong reserve position by the heavy losses already experienced in 1974. The Life business was again a record. The fall in the market value of our investments follows conditions outside our control but the historically high interest rates are reflected in a record level of investment revenue. Continuing inflation on a world-wide scale is a matter of serious concern to international reinsurers with instability in currency values presenting a problem over which we can exert little influence but which may seriously affect the sound the consequences.

In our General Branch we have been looking for positive signs of an overall improvement. We are encouraged by the trend of recent results. In the U.K., the Fire figures for 1972 gave a satisfactory picture and there are indications that 1973 also will produce a profit despite the unprecedented increase in fire wastage Encouraging though the results for 1972 may have been, we were surprised by the measure of reduction in premium for some industrial fire risks. Our experience during these first few months of 1974 leads us to wonder whether such reductions may not be premature. The Motor account also shows a welcome sign of improvement, although the market as a whole is expected to show a

Marine

I referred last year to the apparent deterioration of the Marine market and regrettably we see this trend continuing. At the present highly competitive level of rates we see no prospect of a profitable outcome to the current underwriting account.

The tragic loss in March 1974 of the Turkish DC10 must force the market to take stock of its unhealthy state of excessive capacity. Our Company will bear a part of the loss at a time when there is no margin of profit from current underwriting to cushion the effect. We hope, however, that the lesson will be learned and that the recent spate of ratecutting will be reversed.

There was an increase in our investment income of 15% and the total income is now just over £10 million. Stock markets generally were depressed and with sharply rising interest rates, the market valuation of our investments was substantially reduced during the year. Most of our new money was invested in short-dated Government Bonds or left on short-term deposit.

Why Mr Healey should wait before reflating the economy

If Mr Healey decides to reflate ing to the aggregate of world years ago, less even that during deficit spending, world demand no incomes policy is viable in the economy before the trade as an influence on United the 1971-72 recession. the economy before the summer recess, he will be acting in the central tradition of post-war economic management under Chancellors of both parties. The only difference is that by now we are only a little way from the inflationary disaster which is the nearly inevitable culmination of such policies. To drive too fast when

To drive too fast when one has an unblemished record and is at the peak of firness may be understandable, not particularly dangerous and perhaps even forgivable.

To do so with a long history of culpable accidents and convictions and with manifestly impaired vision and reflexes is extremely dangerous and highly extremely dangerous and highly reprehensible. To that extent Mr Healey will be more to blame than his predecessors who have trodden the same

There need not be much argument that the econo beginning to soften and that some degree of recession (de-fined in terms of a combination of slow real growth in output and rising unemployment) is likely next winter and next year, if fiscal and monetary policy remain unchanged. The evidence of the output, expenditure and labour data clear enough that the peak the "Heath boom" was reached last autumn. The only strong component of demend now is exports. They have grown very rapidly in the early months of this year; and it is quite possible that they will continue to do so despite any moderate weakening of world trade. Britain's share of world exports is now small enough for changes in shere to be more important than what is happen-

Consumers' expenditure in real terms has no buoyancy in it at all as a result of the defla-tionary effect of inflation. In-deed, it may tend to fall slightly or so. Investment spending by private industry now seems likely to tail off before the long awaited recovery ever gets properly established.

There remains a major unknown Government spending. Most recent private forecasts are based on last winter's public expenditure White Paper, less Mr Barber just before Christmas for the present financial year. not formally established any new public expenditure totals; but all the anecdotal evidence and some informal official indications suggest that there is now less effective control over ing quickly in a few months. But it is quite possible that by this winter it will be running rather above the levels assumed

As Mr Barber discovered, it is difficult to boost public spendby private forecasters, partly because of the Treasury's current politicial weakness and partly because there will be less involuntary slippage caused by pressure from competing deother resources.

This, of course, would be a form of creeping reflation, since it would gradually increase the budget deficit above its planned size—by more, that is, than the built-in stabilizers, than the built-in stabilizers automatically increase the deficit when revenues start to tail off and unemployment benefits begin to cost more at the onset of a recession.

But it is most unlikely that this by itself would be enough to meet the case, as tra-ditionally judged, for some further reflation—reduction in indirect taxes, easing of hire credit restrictions, perhaps laster growth in the money supthe kind which political journalists are accustomed to call a mini-budget.

Further plausibility can be conferred upon the case for such action by citing the interpective huge surpluses of the oil producing countries, which cannot possibly spend even if they relend them on the Eurodollar market, act exactly like a budget surplus on a national economy. total public spending than at national economy. Unless any time since the present national governments offset this system was first imposed nine effect by their own planned

It has become fashionable to say, as a result of British and American experiences in the mild recessions of the early 1970s, that whatever else may cure inflation recessions will Unhappily the truth is harsher. Mild recessions do not stop powerfully established in-flations; and nothing but reces-sions stop inflation. So the re-cessions have to be less mild.

This, of course, is a solution outside the tolerances of our present political system and to that extent may be pronounced a non-solution. To the extent that it is a non-solution, there is no solution—not at least until inflation has accelerated to such a point that the balance of the nation's political tolerances change and full employment receives lower priority.

The argument would be faulty if incomes policies, however disguised, offered a reasonably inflation. In logic, they do, at least if a non-market mechanism can be found for determining the myriad absolute and relative pay and pricing decisions which a modern economy needs almost hourly. Without such a mechanism

there is no way of controlling aggregate and average pay and price movements, which are im-palpable abstractions, except by ossifying all relative pay and prices subject only to laborious one). It is also to underwrite with new inflationary finance the prospective inflationary pay settlements before they have even happened, a sophisticated new variant of the post-war policy of giving absolute priority to full employment over stable prices.

At a time when the under-lying rate of inflation, adjusted for direct suppression by the Price Commission and new sub-sidies, is already halving the value of money every three or four years, such policies could only be approved by an anarchist, a totalitarian or a person of limited economic understand

Some will argue against this thesis—that, while Dr Otmar Emminger of the West German Federal Bank was right to argue recently in London that the necessary antidotes to inflation include running the major economies at "something less than full steam", it is still wrong to tolerate the severity Britain.

Clearly there must be some much. But for once we should surely now run our risks on the other side and make "I want" wait upon "I can" and refla-

JOHN BRIGHT GROUP

Difficulties overcome

The 51st Annual General Meeting of the John Bright Group Limited will be held in London on July 17. 1974. The following is a summary of the circulated Statement of the Chairman, Mr. J. M. L. D. Forde, for the year ended March 30, 1974.

THE RESULTS

In spite of the exceptional difficulties experienced during the last year, the results justified the cautious optimism expressed in my tement a year ago. Pre-tax profits of the Group, before deduction of loan stock interest, rose from £745,575 last year to £944.806. In comparing the results for the two years, it must also be remembered that the effect of transitional tax relief last year reduced our taxation liability by £39,000 and the whole basis of taxation has, in fact, been changed. An interim dividend of .875p has been paid and your Board now recommends a final ordinary dividend of 1.05p per ordinary stock unit of 25p - the same figure as last year. After allowing for tax credits the total dividend is equivalent to

TRADING

These results have been achieved in the face of the most unusual sequence of events which combined to test management capability to the full. Apart from the oil crisis, a world wide shortage of nylon polymer, production problems experienced by one synthetic fibre producer and the concentration on exports on the part of another. combined to starve the U.K. based textile companies of nylon and rayon yarns. This was countered to a limited extent by importing foreign produced supplies at premium prices. At the same time, cotton prices rose threefold to unprecedented levels during a period of less than six months. On top of these problems, the three day week came upon us during the closing weeks of our financial

Demand for our products in the Spinning Division, both from within the Group and outside, remains high. The recent capital expenditure on our Carpet Yarn Spinning Unit has been fully justified by results. Our Industrial Textile Division has had an active year, and the output from our specialised Fabric Heat Setting and Impregnating Plant has been greatly increased. In the Cord Fabric Division, demand has been high but the problems of raw materials supply have been particularly acute. For a short period in fact over 80% of the raw materials which we needed had to be procured from overseas sources.

it would be rash in the political and economic climate of today to make forecasts for the future. All I can tell you is that we have started this year with full order books and to date there is no visible stackening of demand. The problems of raw material supplies, however, become more, rather than less, difficult and tend to cloud the outlook for 1974/5, which would otherwise appear to be

THE BROCKS GROUP

Righlights from the circulated statement of the Chairman, Mr. B. R. Clack

- * Group profits before tax rose on an annualised basis from £796,000 to £1,112,050, an increase of 40 per cent.
- * The Marine Division has had another successful year and with the latest addition to the "Seafarer" range, the Seavoice (a ship to shore radio telephone) proving very popular, the outlook is very encouraging.
- * International Time Recording had record exports last year and the order position is buoyant.
- * The Security Division continues to do well and with the acquisition of the Critec Group our coverage was strengthened in the North West of England.
- * With the completion of the new factory at Poole a professional revaluation of the freeholds there resulted in a figure of £2,420,000, while International Time Recording's factory at Hammersmith received an offer of £673,000 for the freehold which has been refused. These values reflect the strong asset base of the company.
- * Despite the difficulties facing industry this year, I believe the Group is well placed and the Board expects another record year.

Financials recession draw nearer. Equities saw the prospect of reflation earlier than expected as the first ray of sunlight for the past two weeks. Share prices opened strongly and, although plagued by profit-takers during the day, remained firm at the close of business. The FT index closed 4.9 up at 253.2 (after 254.6). The Times index added in prime 100.01. Further rises in prime rates in the United States were ignored by equities. Ignored by equities.

Selection Trust's high discount

While the Selection Trust

While the Selection Trust annual report contained little startling information, it went some way to highlight the wide scope of the group's investments. Although the shares have fallen in recent months much in line with the other mining finance houses, thanks to its 11.6 per cent stake in mining finance houses, thanks to its 11.6 per cent stake in Amax, net assets have held up considerably better. Against the 743p a share net asset value at the end of March, the current figure is probably of the order of 630p, equivalent to a 62 per cent discount with the shares 5p higher at 240p last night. Sp higher at 240p last night.

Now yielding 8 per cent, increasing attention will be paid to the shares once the Government Mining Engineer gives his expected go-ahead to the Jurgens Hof mine where the public flotation is expected later this year. But what would help even more would be a substantial improvement in the nickel price and the definitive decision to start up the Agnew decision to start up the Agnew nickel mine in Australia.

Chamber reaffirms faith in gold

Not surprisingly, the Chamber of Mines of South Africa takes the view that the full restoration of gold as a usable asset within the monetary system should go a long way towards restoring flexibility. In his annual president's statement, Mr R. A. Plumbridge says the stable and sustained demand for gold in 1974 can be attributed to chiefly the Imergational ted to chiefly the International Monetary Fund's failure to reach accord on monetary re-form, the continued depreciation of currencies, the poor per-formance by stock markets and the expectations of the remobi-lization of gold reserves and legalization of gold ownership for United States residents.

for United States residents.

Mr Plumbridge adds that the outlook for mining in South Africa is one of high promise, provided inflationary pressures are kept in check and the country's labour force is fully mobilized for productive employment. A much higher level of expenditure by the State on general training and State on general training and education is imperative if productivity is to be substantially

Persistent rise in money rates

The main feature of money markets was the persistent rise in rates, reflecting mounting competitive pressure from overseas interest rates and the Chancellor's promise, which money markets found uncerving, that he would, if necessary, take reflationary action within the next week or two.

action within the next week or two.

The market in day-to-day funds was pretty short and the Bank of England relieved the situation by lending on a very large scale to mine or 10 houses at Minimum Lending Rate, for repayment on Wednesday. Rates held at about 11½ per cent or 11½ per cent for most of the day, before easing to proved 10 per cent or 12 per the frieth around 10 per cent at the finish.

Sterling closes 165 points higher

Trading in foreign exchange markets was marked by wide fluctuations, caused by several shifts of confidence. In the morning, the dollar was traded above Monday's closing levels, but tended to weaken slightly.

But the expectation that the trade figures for May would be announced early then helped sentiment. It was felt that this angured better figures and the dollar picked up a shade in the early afternoon. In the event, however, the figures showed a change from a 590m surplus to a 5790m deficit. The dollar lost ground against all currencies in the late afternoon. The pound, for example, after standing at $2.3540 at around 2.30 pm, was quoted at $2.3600 only twenty minutes after the announcement.

Lead Industries Group

"A year of progress and consolidation, with a continuing high level of capital expenditure."

The 43rd Annual General Meeting of Lead Industries Group Limited was held on the 20th June 1974 in London. The following are extracts from the circulated statement of the Chairman, Mr. A. S. Davies.

Operations and financial results. 1973 can be regarded as a year of progress and consolidation, with a continuing high level of capital expenditure. It was the first year in which the accounts reflected in full the increase in November 1972 in our shareholding in British Titan.

For our subsidiary companies, both U.K. and overseas, production of many products was increased considerably with good utilisation of extra plant now available. There was a marked increase in the value of exports from the U.K.

World prices of raw materials rose substantially, and many metal prices more than doubled. As a result, there has been a heavy increase in the finance employed. With increased turnover due both to greater volume and higher prices, earnings expressed in sterling have increased considerably helped by exchange rates in the case of overseas operations and if a satisfactory return can be maintained it will be the policy to continue to encourage capital expenditure.

Group profit before tax for 1973 was £12,204,000 compared with £7,040,000. This year, in addition to the statement of the geographical source of profit, we have shown an analysis by products.

A final dividend of 2.84p net per ordinary share is recommended making with the interim dividend of 1.47p net, a total of 4.31p net equivalent to 6.3388p gross compared with 6.0375p gross. The dividend is the maximum permitted. After provision of dividends paid and recommended the profits for the year retained in the business amount to £4,289,000.

The Current Year. During 1974, prices of raw materials, particularly non-ferrous metals, have continued to rise necessitating further working capital to finance debtors and stock, though a part of the impact is delayed until the tax on the increased value of stocks becomes due in early 1975. At the present time, we do not anticipate any difficulty in financing at least the volume of business which was achieved during 1973.

It is not possible yet to assess the full effects of the short working week in the U.K., but production was much better than originally expected, and with the help of stocks, deliveries were maintained at a level little short of last year. Demand for most products remains strong and this includes export demand. In our companies overseas current reports in general are satisfactory and associated companies report continuing good progress.

· In our preliminary statement of results, we paid tribute to the excellent co-operation between management and employees which was particularly significant in the U.K. during the period of the short working week. Problems have again been cheerfully tackled, and I know the Board would like me to than's all our employees both at home and overseas for the continued co-operation, especially in periods of
